One Dead, 10 Injured as Gale Sweeps Virginia.

Torrential rains and consequent flood conditions caused the death of a railroad engineer and a brakeman on Maryland's Eastern Shore yesterday, while Southern Maryland surveyed crop damage estimated at $1,000,000.

In Virginia, which was struck by a tornado Thursday morning, the toll was one dead and ten injured.

H. D. Simpler, engineer, of Golt, Md., and Robert L. Lane, of Wilmington, Del., were killed when their train went off the tracks at a washed-out culvert at Harrington, Md., near the Maryland-Delaware line.

A. T. Culver, another brakeman, of Wilmington, was injured, and C. H. Williamson, a brakeman of the same city, was missing.

Federalsburg, on Maryland's Eastern Shore, was the hardest hit of the flooded towns. Five feet of water swept into stores and homes, the Associated Press reported, and the population of 1,800 was moved to higher ground.

In Southern Maryland, particularly in the area around Leonardtown, fully 50 per cent of the tobacco—that section's big money crop—was destroyed by the heavy rain and the 50-mile gale that accompanied it.

Families Marooned.

Two families were marooned by flood waters at Great Mills, 10 miles from Leonardtown. Members of the Leonardtown Fire Department and of the State road department braved the raging waters to rescue them, forming a human chain to reach them.

When it appeared that they might be swept into the St. Marys River, the volunteers had to abandon their efforts.

Later, when the flood had subsided somewhat, Chap Thompson rescued the families with a boat. Those taken to safety were C. C. Sheltzer, his wife and two daughters, and Leonard Coombs and his wife and six children.

Mrs. Anna Thiery, of Decatur Heights, Md., who was vacationing at Great Mills, was rescued from the house in which she was marooned by Eddie Graves, of Loveville. He used a boat to reach her.

The storm, bred of the hurricane that devastated the Florida Keys, raised havoc with roads in both Maryland and Virginia, but the A. A. A. District of Columbia Motor Club announced last night that all principal routes to the north and west are open.

Storm warnings on Chesapeake Bay kept virtually all small craft tied up. The wind velocity at Cape Henry was 38 miles an hour as the storm shifted to the southeast.

Tug Reported Sunk.

The tug Fanny May, of Norfolk, which was towing barges from Philadelphia, was reported sunk near the mouth of the Rappahannock River. The tender Violet, of the lighthouse division, sent a radio message to Norfolk saying it had removed the tug's crew of ten, according to the Associated Press.

In Federalsburg, Md., it was impossible to get around without swimming or using a boat. The water was 6 feet deep in the business section. Last night fears of a food shortage were expressed as a survey showed that only two small stores had escaped the flood waters.

The town, according to the Associated Press, was completely cut off from the outside, neither rail nor highway traffic being possible.

The swiftness of the water made it difficult to evacuate the inhabitants to higher ground in rowboats, and a call was sent to Secretary, Md., for a speedboat.

The telephone operators stuck to their posts as the flood rose past the first floor of their building. In order to get food to them, a man tied a rope around his waist and swam to them.

Ralph Willis, Main street jeweler, was nearly drowned when he attempted to escape from his home. He lost his footing in water up to his neck and was swept down by the current. He grasped a fence and finally was dragged to safety through the window of a house.

A burglar alarm sounded in the Federalsburg Bank in the midst of rescue efforts. Citizens who rowed their boats there discovered that the flood waters had caused a short circuit.

In the Negro section of the town,

Browns Take Two and Push Nats Into 7th

Cellarites Win Twin Bill by Batting Rallies in Closing Frames.

By Shirley Povich.

The league cellar is yawning again for the Nats. At the end of nearly five hours of baseball at Griffith Stadium yesterday, Washington had succeeded only in dropping a pair of ball games to the last-place Browns, who hauled the Nats back into seventh place, only a game and a half removed from eighth.

There was some doubt about how both games would end as late as the last inning of each, but Harlan Clift ended all speculation as to the first when he walloped a home run into the center-field bleacher with two mates on base to provide the moving force of an 11-8 victory for the Browns. At the time of Clift's blow, the Nats were in possession of an 8-7 lead.

That second game was a cruel fate for Buck Newsom, who saw victory elude him in a 10-inning hurling duel with Paul Andrews, when Red Kress fumbled a ground ball that represented the winning run. The Browns won the game, 2 to 1, but Newsom was almost blameless.

Error Gives Lary Life.

In that tenth inning, with the score deadlocked at 1-1, Washington played as if determined to put Lyn Lary on base. Lary sent a weak foul pop toward the Browns' dugout and Cliff Bolton and Cecil Travis attempted to collaborate on the catch with the natural result that they succeeded only in colliding while the ball dropped harmlessly to the ground.

Thus reprieved, Lary returned to the bat and sent a mild grounder to Red Kress, who booted the ball and Lary was safe on the error. Burns thereupon singled to center to send West to third and he scored when Solter's grounder took a freak hop over Kress' head for a single. The rally was confined to one run when West was thrown out by Johnny Stone on an attempt to score on Coleman's short fly.

The Nats' tenth-inning threat was comprised of a single by Miles with two out and a walk to Travis. In this emergency Powell popped to Lary for the final out.

But for Powell, the game would have been won back in the eighth. With two men on base, he gave chase to Solters' hard drive, crashed into the center-field fence with a sickening thud but held onto to the ball for the third out. It was his second collision with the fence during the double-header. He had taken an even harder bump in the first game when he collided with the wall in a futile chase for Solters' triple.

Kuhel's Catch Brilliant.

And but for Joe Kuhel the Browns would have won the game in the ninth. Two were on base when Kuhel made a brilliant stab of Clift's hard smash and caught it in the webbing of his glove behind first base to end the inning.

The Browns took a 1-to-0 lead in the third on singles by Carey and Lary and Kress' triple and Starr's single tied it up for the Nats in the fifth. Thereafter Andrews and Russell settled down to their duel, with Andrews restricting the Nats to four hits in the last five innings and no Nat advancing beyond second base.

That first game was a fine display of base ingratitude by four Washington pitchers, who were unmoved by the Nats' gallant rallies that wiped out St. Louis leads of 4-0 and 7-3 and eventually put

Nazis Dealt Stinging Rebuke As Judge Frees Flag Rioters

Americans, Accused of Being Communists, Held Privileged to Show Resentment Against Hitler Regime and Its 'Barbaric' Principles.

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 6.—Magistrate Louis B. Brodsky today bitterly excoriated the Hitler regime, called the German liner Bremen a pirate ship and dismissed charges against five alleged Communists held in connection with the riot aboard the Bremen on July 16.

A sixth defendant was ordered held for assault and violation of the Sullivan law, "although he might not have been guilty of unlawful assembly had he not shown a belligerent attitude." This man, Edward Drolette, said by police to be the ringleader in the disturbance, struck Detective Matthew Solomon with brass knuckles and received a bullet in return.

The rioters tore the Nazi flag from the crack liner's standard and threw it into the Hudson before they were repulsed by 400 police and German sailors aboard the ship.

"The prominent display of this emblem (the Nazi flag) even carried with it the same sinister implication as a pirate ship sailing defiantly into the harbor of a nation, one of whose ships it had just scuttled, with the black flag of piracy proudly flying aloft," Brodsky said.

"In a large sense, indeed it might seem that whatever disturbances attending the sailing of the Bremen were provoked by the flaunting of this emblem to those who regard it as a defiant challenge to society."

The five defendants freed were Arthur Blair, William Bailey, William Howe, George Blackwell and Vincent McCormack. The courtroom, as in the former hearings of the Bremen riot defendants, was heavily guarded but there was no disturbance.

"These men were part of a group of persons," the Jewish judge con-

Sleuth Admits Slaying Bride In Gun Tussle

Ohioan Says 'Letter Wife' Was Jealous of 'Rose', Drew Weapon.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Sept. 6.—Joseph P. Meluch, amateur detective, confessed today, Detective Chief John Carroll said, that he beat his "correspondence club" bride of six weeks to death with a revolver in their Lorain, Ohio, home last August 14, during an argument over his acquaintance with a woman called "Dago Rose."

Carroll said Meluch, in a statement signed before him and Police Chief Theodore Walker, of Lorain, insisted he took the revolver away from his 21-year-old wife when she tried to fire it at him during an argument in which she accused him of overfriendliness with the other woman.

The correspondence-course detective, who surrendered but insisted on his innocence here Wednesday, made a calm recital of the fatal argument with his bride, Carroll said. When shown a picture of the woman he remarked, "pretty girl."

In the statement as quoted by Carroll, Meluch told of his wife's intense jealousy of other women, "particularly one known as 'Dago Rose.'" The "old argument" was resumed on the afternoon of Au-

League Wins Concession From Italy

Commission Is Named to Study Ethiopian Problem Anew.

France, Britain Included in Group as Rome Backs Down.

The Situation Abroad.

The Italian delegation to Geneva made its first concession in agreeing on a five-man commission, including Britain and France, to study the Ethiopian problem.

In Rome the semi-official Journal Azione hinted Italy might demand Britain's exclusion from Egypt if London continued to look on Italy as a threat to Britain in Africa.

It was reported from London that Britain is keeping a close eye on what was described as anti-British and pro-Italian propaganda in Egypt.

Emperor Haile Selassie sent a new appeal to the League to solve the Italo-Ethiopian trouble. Britain, with the greatest of secrecy, brought a number of native troops, variously estimated at from 125 to 1,250, to her legation in Addis Ababa.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Geneva, Sept. 6.—For the first time in three days of diplomatic fencing Italy tonight showed signs of weakening under the force of international pressure.

Premier Benito Mussolini's representatives surprisingly withdrew objections to allowing Britain and France to sit on a five-man committee to study the Italo-Ethiopian question while the League Council proceeds to other matters on its agenda.

Still more surprising, the Italians announced they would recede from their previous refusal to sit at the Council table if the Ethiopian representatives were present. They said they were willing to participate so long as the Ethiopians refrained from speaking.

This about-face—following two days of seemingly unshakeable determination to bend the League to Italy's will or quit Geneva—revived hope in some quarters that Mussolini might be preparing to accept a peace formula involving concessions in Ethiopia.

The Council, in a session lasting only an hour and 12 minutes, unanimously voted to turn the Italo-Ethiopia dispute over to a committee composed of representatives of Britain, France, Poland, Spain and Turkey. Italy refrained from voting.

Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Italian delegate who for two days has held the Council in the hollow of his hand, made only a nominal appearance. He strolled in, calmly smoking a cigarette, but disappeared as soon as the meeting got under way. He was believed telephoning latest developments to Mussolini.

Ethiopians Withdraw.

Shortly after approval of the committee, Dr. Tekla Hawariat, of Ethiopia, and his French legal adviser, Gaston Jeze, withdrew from the chamber. Aloisi then resumed his seat.

Approval of the committee puts the Italo-Ethiopian problem right back where it was last month when Britain and France tried to deter Mussolini from war plans by dangling offers of huge concessions in Ethiopia before him. Il Duce turned down everything the three-power conference at Paris had to offer.

However, it is understood that similar procedure will be followed by the League committee. Whether they have anything more generous to offer—or Mussolini is willing to accept anything less—can be determined only when the committee swings into action.

The group met for the first time tonight with Joseph Avenol, League secretary, and elected Salvador Madariaga, of Spain, as chairman.

League circles were encouraged tonight that the united insistence of Capt. Anthony Eden, of Great Britain, and Premier Pierre Laval had caused Italy to back down. They saw possibility that further pressure might win added concessions from Mussolini.

Mexico Warns Italy.

Some were optimistic enough to believe the committee might find a compromise which would prevent war and save the League from ignominy—a double miracle few would have forecast yesterday or Wednesday when Italy was cracking the whip over the League.

After a brief session opening at 7:10 p. m. the committee adjourned until tomorrow morning.

Italy's new willingness to cooperate snagged on one point. The committee was not constituted under any provision of the League Covenant because Italy objected. However, if the committee fails to

Roosevelt Proclaims A Recess in New Deal; Business Hails Pledge

Letter Says President's 'Basic Program' Is Complete.

Markets Shoot Up With Reassurance

Opposition Finds Flaw in Failure to Pledge Budget Balance.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt's assertion yesterday that the "basic program" of the New Deal had been completed and that business would be given a "breathing spell" was hailed by politicians and business men alike as the beginning of a new phase of the New Deal.

Hope was expressed that the cards finally had been distributed and that the game would now proceed without prospect of further immediate changes in the rules.

From some sources, however, came expressions of doubt, based on the feeling that the President's statement was not sufficiently definite, principally because he made no reference to any plan to bring about a balanced budget.

Markets Shoot Up.

Substantial reaction came from the stock and commodity markets, which shot upward after publication of the statement, contained in a letter to Roy W. Howard, chain newspaper publisher. Howard had written to the President telling him that business men were frightened and that no real recovery could be expected until business is given "a recess from further experimentation."

Howard echoed the public expressions of various business groups that have been hammering at the White House for just such assurance as was given in the President's statement. President Roosevelt, however, has previously given no definite reply to these demands. He apparently was waiting for completion of his "desirable legislation" program.

Since adjournment of Congress there has been increasing indication of a tightening up of Government emergency activities. Earlier in the week the President indicated that he believed the New Deal had passed the planning stage and was entering the management stage. As a part of his program for more management and less planning, the President put under control of the Budget Bureau nearly all of the emergency agencies and indicated there must be considerable personnel reduction.

Opponents Disarmed.

Observers believe the President's "tightening-up" program and his asusrance to business are designed to meet the attacks of his opposition. At the moment it appears that opposition to the President will center largely on huge New Deal expenditures and on the premise that business would recover more rapidly if let alone.

In putting emergency organizations under the budget and in his assurance of a business "breathing spell," friends of the Administration saw the President at least partially disarming his opponents.

Members of Congress hailed the statement as an indication of a short session next year. The only business legislation suggested by the President for the next session is re-enactment of some form of national industrial recovery act. He has asked congressional committees to study the problem through the recess and to be prepared with some form of new legislation.

"No Crook Loves A Cop."

The President's attitude also fitted in with the fact that the Treasury Department is going over Government finances with the purpose of preparing for a new budget that is expected to show considerable reductions. His statement followed that of Secretary Morgenthau pointing out that, in the first two months of the present fiscal year, the Government has been living within its estimate of expenditures.

In his letter, dated August 26, Howard told President Roosevelt that as an independent editor he had been seeking "reasons for the doubts and uncertainties of those business men who are skeptics, critics and outright opponents of your program at a time when there is no commensurate dissatisfaction being evidenced by others of the electorate."

He said the fact that certain elements of business are growing more hostile to the Administration is "too obvious to be classed as news."

Howard dismissed "certain ele-

Text of the Correspondence Of Roosevelt and Howard

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 6.—The text of the exchange of letters between President Roosevelt and Roy W. Howard, publisher of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, follows:

Mr. Howard, in a letter dated August 26, 1935, wrote:

My dear Mr. President:

As an independent editor keenly interested in the objectives of the New Deal, I have been seeking reasons for the doubts and uncertainties of those business men who are skeptics, critics and outright opponents of your program at a time when there is no commensurate dissatisfaction being evidenced by others of the electorate.

I do not accept it as a fact that the interests of what we broadly term business, necessarily are in conflict with mass interests.

I expect to continue in support of your stated interpretation of American liberalism — notwithstanding my dissent and disagreement as to some details and some theories. Therefore, it is in a friendly and I hope constructive spirit that I attempt a few observations and opinions which I believe timely and pertinent.

These represent, I believe, a composite of the most frequently expressed criticisms of your Administration.

That certain elements of business have been growing more hostile to your administration is a fact too obvious to be classed as news. So long as this hostility emanated from financial racketeers, public exploiters and the sinister forces spawned by special privilege, it was of slight importance. No crook loves a cop. But any experienced reporter will tell you that throughout the country many business men who once gave you sincere support are now, not merely hostile, they are frightened.

Many of these men whose patriotism and sense of public service will compare with that of any men in political life, have become convinced and sincerely believe:

That you fathered a tax bill that aims at revenge rather than revenue—revenge on business;

That the Administration has side-stepped broadening the tax

Swells Drive Dixie Higher On Coral Reef

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 6.—Heavy ocean swells washed the stranded steamer Dixie higher aground on French Reef, 60 miles south of Miami, as Morgan Line officials today expressed hope of refloating the ship.

Removal of 231 passengers and many crew members in thrilling rescues as storm-tossed waves pounded the liner lightened its load and gave encouragement that when the task of unloading the ship's cargo is completed it would be released.

The tug Warbler, meanwhile, continued to make soundings preparatory to an effort to pull the ship off the reef where it ploughed hard aground in last Monday's tropical hurricane.

Remaining with his ship was Capt. Einer W. Sundstrom, 50-year-old skipper of the Morgan Lines, who was injured in the storm, but personally supervised the task of safely removing the passengers to rescue craft. With him was a skeleton crew of 57 members. The sturdy captain said he would not leave until ordered to do so by officials of the line.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 6.—Three separate investigations began today to determine whether war veterans who died in the tropical hurricane which swept the Florida Keys, could have been saved.

Simultaneously, relief workers, under the personal direction of Gov. Dave Sholtz, marshaled their forces to bring order out of chaos and to meet the threat of pestilence.

Gov. Sholtz, returning from an airplane tour of inspection tonight, said he had not "officially ordered cremation of the bodies, but if those in charge on the ground ordered it I will back them up. I think that seems to be the best thing to do."

Earlier, the Red Cross headquarters made public here a message which read:

"Lieut. G. E. Fairbanks, Coast Guard, at Snake Creek, received the following message by short wave from Capt. W. H. Nunter, Dr. Hanson and Dr. McCready have been authorized by Gov. Sholtz to cremate. Coast Guard will transport no more bodies.'"

The Governor said he had not personally given such authorization, but that he would be guided in the matter by recommendations of health authorities.

'Leaping Lena' Charges Plot For Claim in Kingfish; 2 Held

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Police held a man and a woman tonight as they checked up a sensational story told them by "Leaping Lena" Levy of an attempt to force her to sign away her interest in her brother, Kingfish Levinsky, the prizefighter.

Her hands strapped to the side of her bed in Jackson Park Hospital, where she was taken last night, Mrs. Levy, manager for the Kingfish, said Jack Apple, 28, of Minneapolis, and three others urged her at a hotel dinner party Thursday to waive her interest, reputedly one-quarter, in her brother so a fight for him could be arranged in Washington, D. C.

Apple and Mrs. Doris Margham were taken in custody.

According to Police Sergt. Clarence Sweeney, Mrs. Levy said she went to Washington earlier this week with Apple and was shown a contract for the "King to fight Buddy Baer in Washington or New York."

Then last night at the hotel, Lena was heard screaming: "Help! Police!"

A few minutes later she appeared at the "King's Rendezvous," a spot owned by her brother. Another brother, Samuel Krakow (the family name of the Levinskys is Krakow) said she looked "all mussed up." Kingfish, who was there also, took her to the hospital and Samuel swore out the warrants for Apple and the Margham woman.

Lena's story, according to the officers, said that part of the Kingfish's $25,000 purse for the Joe Louis fight was missing and assertions were made that someone in the hotel party threatened to get Pete Riley and Hal Steinman, two of the Kingfish's managers, "knocked off."

Apple's version of the affair as told to police said that Mrs. Levy came to the room in the hotel of a couple he knew only as "Ross" and without warning opened a window as if she intended to leap from it. He said he ran to the window and pulled her back and added:

"I won't say anything until Lena regains consciousness. She is a wonderful woman and would never get me into trouble. As soon as she is able to talk this mystery will be cleared up."

of business" with the statement that "no crook loves a cop," but he added that many men who once gave the President their sincere support are "not merely hostile, they are frightened."

Partisans Disregarded.

Howard then centered his attack on the new tax legislation, declaring many had become convinced "that you fathered a tax bill that aims at revenge rather than revenue —revenge on business." He said many felt that the Administration had sidesteppd broadening the tax base to approximate the needs of the situation.

President Roosevelt replied that he noted facts contained in Howard's letter "with no little sympathy and understanding."

The President said he believed the skeptics, political partisans and "do nothing" advocates could be safely disregarded.

"As the essential outline of what has been done rises into view," he said, "I am confident that doubts and misapprehension will vanish.'

Tax Bill Defended.

The President said that New Deal legislation was remedial and that "it would serve no purpose to make a doctrinaire effort to distinguish between that which was addressed to recovery and that which was addressed to reform." He declared "our actions were in conformity with basic economic purposes which were set forth three years ago."

After reciting the objectives of his Administration, including restoration of the banking system, protection of security investors, guaranteeing labor freedom to organize, and various social security measures, the President said:

"I do not believe that any responsible political party in the country will dare to go before the public in opposition to any of these major objectives."

Defending the tax bill, he said its purpose was not to destroy wealth but to "create a broader range of opportunity." He said the new graduated corporation taxes will mean an actual reduction to 95 per cent of the corporations. The poor man, he said, already is being heavily taxed through "invisible" taxation added to the price of everything he buys.

Breathing Spell Here.

After completing an outline of his program, the President said:

"This basic program, however, has now reached substantial completion and the breathing spell of which you speak is here—very decidedly so.

"It is a source of great satisfaction that at this moment conditions are such as to offer further substantial and widespread recovery. Unemployment is still with us, but it is steadily diminishing and our efforts to meet its problems are unflagging.

"I do not claim the magician's wand. I do not claim that Government alone is responsible for these definitely better circumstances. But we all know the very great effect of the saving of banks, of farms, of homes, the building of public works, the providing of relief for the destitute and many other direct governmental acts for the betterment of conditions. And we do claim that we have helped to restore that public confidence which now offers so substantial a foundation for our recovery."

These statements were immediately met with the Republican cry of "campaign promises."

"The President has opened the 1936 campaign with a new set of assurances and promises," said Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the Republican national committee.

Speaker Byrns said he believed conditions fully justified the President's statement.

However, from some Democrats and many Republicans came demands for a balanced budget.

tinued, "who were three protesting the flaunting of the German emblem, which they had a right to do so long as they did not disturb the peace. The question, however, of the commission of the individual acts of violence charged independently, present quite another problem. Under the guise of liberty of lawful assembly, no specific acts of violence may be committed by any individual."

The defendants were represented as counsel b Congressman Vito Marcantonio and four other attorneys.

The court's written opinion, in part, follows:

Calls Nazis Barbaric.

"It may well be, perhaps, as was so forcibly urged upon . . . the flying in New York Harbor of the standard bearing the swastika was, rightly or wrongly, regarded by these defendants and others of our citizenry as a gratuitously brazen flaunting of an emblem which symbolizes all that is apothetical to American ideals of the God-given and inalienable rights of all people to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that in their minds this emblem of the Nazi regi mestands for disenfranchisement of naturals solely on religious or ethnological grounds, the debasement of the learned professions; the deprivation of the right to education and to the earning of a livelihood; the enslavement of women and workers; the suppression of the blessed trinity of free speech, freedom of the press and lawful assembly; the degradation of culture, an international menace threatening freedom; a revolt against civilization; in brief, an alavistic throwback to pre-mediaval, of not barbaric, social and political conditions."

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

MOST common-sense persons will regard President Roosevelt's letter to Roy W. Howard promising a "breathing spell" for business as slightly late but a good start.

It was slightly late, because if Mr. Roosevelt had given that assurance some time back, the exaggerated attacks of his extreme critics would not have been so effective in undermining him and most of his works. By his silence on this matter, sections of the public were led by the more bitter critics of the Administration to believe that Mr. Roosevelt was but a smiling Stalin, a Hitler in velvet gloves, working deviously, not merely to bring about a more perfect Union, but to revolutionize our system of Government. Large numbers who hesitated to accept that extreme indictment, nevertheless, lost some confidence in the New Deal.

Business men, who should have been concentrating thought and energy upon increasing their volume, were distraught and worried about what Washington might do to them. The blessings of social security which the Administration had given to their employes, were denied to them. They worired under a cloud of insecurity at the very moment when fundamental business conditions seemed brighter than at any time since 1929.

Now that the gesture has been made, it is received generally as a good start. Three days ago, it was stated in this column: "Expanded business activity offers the best bet now. Instead of striking a menacing pose, which enables his political opponents to say that he is retarding rather than facilitating recovery. Mr. Roosevelt could adopt a friendly attitude, place less emphasis on the doctor's prescription from Washington and more on encouraging natural recuperative forces, and if this guess is worth anything at all, there would be a quick easing of the tension which keeps the Administration and the business life of the country pulling at cross purposes * * * Once this situation were cleared—and so much of it is temperamental on both sides and so readily amenable to a touch of mutual friendliness that it is a tragic loss for such tension to continue—the chances are all in favor of our going over the top quite soon."

But this is only a start. While business is demonstrating what it can do under the reassurance which it has just received from the President, the Administration itself has a large task of performance ahead of it, and one in which little progress will be made except by steady pressure from Mr. Roosevelt personally. That is the job of pulling down expenses.

The object is to check the billions of dollars which are being stacked up on the debt annually —to head back toward a balanced budget. Increased business activity will produce greater revenues and thus attack the deficit from one side. Increased economizing by the Government will curtail the expenditure and attack it from the other side. Both approaches are necessary.

Already, Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau and the Budget Bureau are preparing to cut expenditures next year. But cutting could begin right now. NRA, dead more than three months, still has 3,000 persons on the pay roll, most of them doing nothing. You can go through one agency after another and find two people—one dillying and the other dallying, as Howard Brubaker says—on a job that ought not keep one person busy.

What is being done to get unemployed back into private industry? The Government is spending less than $7,000,000 on the Federal-State reemployment agencies charged with finding private employment for the idle. That is less than a dollar a head a year for the estimated number of idle workers. Work relief is costing upwards of $700 per man per year. And the trouble with work relief is that when the money is spent on July 1, next year, those still unemployed in private industry must be carried on.

With industry expanding, what better time could there be for throwing strong Administration support behind the Government employment service in the hope of fitting demoralized, discouraged recipients of relief back into private jobs?

While there are countless rat holes which the Administration can plug to stop leakage of Federal money, the item primarily responsible for the heavy deficit is the cost of relief. Placing of these unemployed back in private industry is the only way that deficit-making expense can be materially reduced.

Foreign governments are making heavy use of radio to get their propaganda into the homes of the outside world. A radio listener in Washington heard London broadcast the Archbishop of York's defense of the British attitude in the Ethiopian crisis five times. Italy is putting on 'impartial" news reports taken from Italian newspapers. Thus modern war brings new horrors.

One of the objectionable features about the grazing act amendments just vetoed by President Roosevelt was that civil service provisions had not been included. These were dropped out by a Senate committee after one of the Senators read a bit of doggerel from a Western cattleman who objected to being bossed by educated tenderfeet fresh from their examinations. The doggerel was this:

"I am a gallant grazier.
"I've been out of college a year.
"I understand mathematics,
French and dramatics.
"But what in the hell is a steer?"

base to the extent necessary to approximate the needs of the situation;

That there can be no real recovery until the fears of business have been allayed through the granting of a breathing spell to industry and a recess from further experimentation until the country can recover its losses.

I know you have repeatedly stated your position on sections of the Nation's problems, but as an editor I know also the necessity for repetition and reiteration. There is need to undo the damage that has been done by misinterpreters of the New Deal.

I know that you feel as I do—that with all its faults, and the abuses it has developed, our system has in the past enabled us to achieve greater mass progress than has been attained by any other system on earth.

Smoke out the sinister forces seeking to delude the public into believing that an orderly modernization of a system we want to preserve, is revolution in disguise.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
ROY W. HOWARD.

The President, under date of September 2, 1935, replied:

My dear Mr. Howard:

I appreciate the tone and purpose of your letter, and fairness impels me to note with no little sympathy and understanding the facts which you record, based on your observations as a reporter of opinion throughout the United States.

I can well realize, moreover, that the many legislative details and processes incident to the long and arduous session of the Congress should have had the unavoidable effect of promoting some confusion in many people's minds.

I think we can safely disregard the skeptics of whom you speak. Skeptics were present when Noah said it was going to rain and they refused to go into the ark.

Heard 'Do Nothing' On Wilson Reforms

We can also disregard those who are actuated by a spirit of political partisanship or by a willingness to gain or retain personal profit at the expense of, and detriment to, their neighbors.

Then there were those who told us to do nothing. We had heard of the do-nothing policy before and from the same sources and in many cases from the same individuals. We heard it when Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson proposed reforms.

The country has learned how to measure that kind of opposition. But there are critics who are honest and non-partisan and who are willing to discuss and to learn. I believe we owe, therefore, a positive duty to clarify our purposes, to describe our methods and to reiterate our ideals.

Such clarification is greatly aided by the efforts of those public-spirited newspapers which serve the public well by a true portrayal of the facts and a unbiased printing of the news.

However, experience is the best teacher and results are the best evidence. As the essential outline of what has been done rises into view I am confident that doubts and misapprehension will vanish. I am confident further that business as a whole will agree with you and with me that the interests of what we broadly term business are not in conflict with, but wholly in harmony with, mass interests.

I note what you say of the hostility emanating from financial racketeers, public exploiters and sinister forces. Such criticism it is an honor to bear. A car with many cylinders can keep running in spite of plenty of carbon—but it knocks. When it is overhauled an important part of the job is the removal of that carbon.

In the large, the depression was the culmination of unhealthy, however innocent, arrangements in agriculture, in business and in finance.

Our legislation was remedial, and as such, it would serve no purpose to make a doctrinaire effort to distinguish between that which was addressed to recovery and that which was addressed to reform. The two, in an effort toward sound and fundamental recovery, are inseparable. Our actions were in conformity with the basic economic purposes which were set forth three years ago.

Balance in Economy Set as New Deal Aim.

As spokesman for those purposes I pointed out that it was necessary to seek a wise balance in American economic life, to restore our banking system to public confidence, to protect investors in the security market, to give labor freedom to organize and protection from exploitation, to safeguard and develop our national resources, to set up protection against the vicissitudes incident to old-age and unemployment, to relieve destitution and suffering and to relieve investors and consumers from the burden of unnecessary corporate machinery.

I do not believe that any responsible political party in the country will dare to go before the public in opposition to any of these major objectives.

The tax program of which you speak is based upon a broad and just social and economic purpose. Such a purpose, it goes without saying, is not to destroy wealth, but to create broader range of opportunity, to restrain the growth of unwholesome and sterile accumulations and to lay the burdens of government where they can best be carried.

This law affects only those individual people who have incomes over $50,000 a year, and individual estates of decedents who leave over $40,000.

Moreover, it gives recognition to the generally accepted fact that larger corporations enjoying the advantages of size over smaller corporations possess relatively greater capacity to pay. Consequently, the act changes the rate of tax on net earnings from a flat 13¾ per cent to a differential ranging from 12½ per cent to 15 per cent.

No reasonable person thinks that this is going to destroy competent corporations or impair business as a whole. Taxes on 95 per cent of our corporations are actually reduced by the new tax law.

A small excess profits tax is also provided as well as an intercorporate dividend tax which will have the wholesome effect of encouraging and simplification of overly complicated and wasteful intercorporate relationships.

Congress declined to broaden the tax base because it was recognized that the tax base had already been broadened to a very considerable extent during the past five years.

I am aware of the sound arguments advanced in favor of making every citizen pay an income tax, however small his income. England is cited as an example. But it should be recalled that despite complaints about higher taxes our interest payments on all public debts, including local governments, require only 3 per cent of our national income as compared with 7 per cent in England.

Broadening of Base Very Real Since 1929.

The broadening of our tax base in the past few years has been very real. What is known as consumers' taxes, namely, the invisible taxes paid by people in every walk of life, fall relatively much more heavily upon the poor man than on the rich man.

In 1929, consumers' taxes represented only 30 per cent of the national revenue. Today they are 60 per cent and even with the passage of the recent tax bill the proportion of these consumers' taxes will drop only 5 per cent.

This Administration came into power pledged to a very considerable legislative program. It found the condition of the country such as to require drastic and far-reaching action. Duty any necessity required us to move on a broad front for more than two years.

It seemed to the Congress and to me better to achieve these objectives as expeditiously as possible in order that not only business, but the public generally, might know those modifications in the conditions and rules of economic enterprise which were involved in our program.

This basic program, however, has now reached substantial completion and the "breathing spell" of which you speak is here—very decidedly so.

It is a source of great satisfaction that at this moment conditions are such as to offer further substantial and widespread recovery. Unemployment is still with us but it is steadily diminishing and our efforts to meet its problems are unflagging.

I do not claim the magician's wand. I do not claim that Government alone is responsible for these definitely better circumstances. But we all know the very great effect of the saving of banks, of farms, or homes, the building of public works, the providing of relief for the destitute, and many other direct governmental acts for the betterment of conditions. And we do claim that we have helped to restore that public confidence which now offers so substantial a foundation for our recovery.

I take it that we are all not merely seeking, but getting, the recovery of confidence, not merely the confidence of a small group, but that basic confidence on the part of the mass of our population, in the soundness of our economic life and in the honesty and justice of the purpose of its economic rules and methods.

I like the last sentence of your letter, and I repeat it—"with all its faults and with the abuses it has developed, our system has in the past enabled us to achieve greater mass progress than has been attained by an other system on earth. Smoke out the sinister forces seeking to delude the public into believing that an orderly modernization of a system we want to preserve is revolution in disguise."

Very sincerely yours,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Apple Crop Faces Danger of Rotting

Heavy Rains in Virginia May Cause Scabs.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., Sept. 6.—The possibility of apples developing storage scab as a result of the heavy rains of the past five days was brought to the attention of horticulturists today by Dr. Walter S. Hough, entomologist in charge of the Winchester research laboratory.

Storage scab develops after the apples have been packed, and fruit packed as No. 1 may have to be marked down to No. 3 grade or lower, it was said.

Since the first of the month, 3.01 inches of rain has fallen here. Peach picking was interrupted at the peak and considerable loss from rot is reported.

Driver Files Appeal.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 6.—Charged with drunk driving, Lewis Bettis appealed and posted $300 bond for appearance at the October term of Frederick Circuit Court. He was tried by Trial Justice A. J. Tavenner.

Winchester Prepares Bid For Mayors' Convention

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 6.—Winchester has prepared an invitation for the League of Municipalities to hold the 1936 convention here, it was learned today. The invitation will be presented at the State meeting in Fredericksburg, September 25 to 26.

City Manager Arthur M. Field has accepted an invitation to preside over a breakfast session, September 26, when Russell Van Nest Black, planning consultant for New Jersey and Virginia, will address the public works officials and engineers on "Correlating State and Local Planning for Public Works." Dr. C. R. Anderson, mayor, and members of the city council are planning to attend the convention.

County Jail Proposal Revived in Martinsburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 6.—Proposed erection of a new county jail here, with either WPA or PWA funds, was given impetus yesterday when a delegation of business and professional men appeared before County Court in support of the project. The plan, discussed earlier by the court, was dropped on advice of an architect that it would be impossible to complete plans within the time specified for WPA applications.

The business men urged that the program be undertaken, promising their assistance. A spokesman for the county planning board also gave assurance that the specifications could be prepared before the deadline.

Convict Vessel Will Carry 673 Felons to Exile

Doomed Men Eat Last Supper in France; Only Hope Is Escape.

By the Associated Press.

St. Martin-de-Re, France, Sept. 6. A miserable company of gray-clad convicts ate their last supper in the homeland tonight, for tomorrow they sail for the dreaded Guiana prisons.

The steamer Martiniere is ready to leave with her human cargo of 673 criminals banished from France. For many of them it will be a one-way trip, with their only hope of freedom an escape to the Venezuelan mainland.

Passengers for the Martiniere have been arriving at this island concentration camp for two weeks, in railway cars and trucks fitted with iron-barred cells. On the ship they will occupy cages, like those provided for circus animals. For 14 days they will sit on wooden benches and sleep in canvas hammocks with only a few minutes each day on deck.

It will be years before any prisoner again sets foot in France. Each must not only serve his term at hard labor, but also an equal number of years in exile during which he is confined to the penal island. Those sentenced to terms of more than eight years must stay for life.

An average of 100 escape each year, but many of them die in the disease-infested swamplands through which they must flee.

The Martiniere, built for the German navy and captured by France during the war, will land her human cargo at St. Laurent du Maroni, distributing station for the various camps. Devils Island, famous throughout the world, will receive none of the prisoners, for it is reserved for those convicted of crimes against the state.

Seas Drive Dixie Higher on Reef

Pacific and the Morgan Line, said he believed prospects of getting the steamer off the reef were good. All of the cargo is to be unloaded as quickly as possible, but Gray said that might take a week or two.

Passengers and crew members who were brought from the stranded ship to Miami by rescue boats Wednesday night and yesterday were en route to New York on a Seaboard Air Line special train, expected to reach there tomorrow morning. Others departed for the North on the Florida East Coast railway train at 11 a. m. (Eastern standard time) today. A group of 130 were scheduled to leave tonight.

Morgan Line officials declined to estimate the probable damage to the Dixie, which was en route from New Orleans to New York, but there were unofficial estimates that it would run close to $500,000.

Family Reunions Held By Millers and Dursts

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 6.—The Miller family held its annual reunion at Grantsville. Four hundred attended from Delaware, Scottsdale, Pa., and Ohio.

The Durst family held its reunion Sunday at the home of Edward B. Durst, Fort Hill, Pa., near Grantsville.

Several hundred members of the Menges, Manges and Mangus clans in Maryland and Pennsylvania, descendants of a common ancestor who settled in Somerset County (Pa.) before the Revolutionary War and served in it, gathered near Berlin, Pa., and formed an organization to be known as the Menges Historical Association.

Senator Coad Against Extra Session in Md.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Sept. 6.—State Senator J. Allan Coad (Democrat), St. Marys, today expressed opposition to the proposed extra session of the Legislature in February to raise funds to shoulder the State's relief burden.

The Democratic floor leader said he saw no real necessity for the extra session. He declined to broaden his statement, saying he would release a general resume of the reasons against a special session at a later date.

England Orders Apples.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 6.—The Bartenstein Orchards Co., Inc., is awaiting a break in the weather to begin picking apples for a shipment to England. Delicious, Bonum and Ben Davis are the varieties ordered. The apple crop in this section is far ahead of last year, and a bumper crop of Stayman Winesaps and Yorks will be harvested.

Three Probes Are Launched On Veterans' Deaths in Storm

terrific winds which tossed water over the islands to drown many, ranged from 246, the figure of Washington Red Cross headquarters, to 1,000.

Funeral pyres may burn in desolate spots as the wind and water and the passing of time—the storm struck the keys Mondays night—have turned bodies into things of sheer horror.

Dr. T. S. Kennedy, district sanitary officer of the State board of health, agreed with the Governor. He said:

"The only thing to do is to burn those bodies down there."

Dr. Kennedy, who estimated definite check of the dead might show 500 fatalities, said authority for disposal of the veterans' bodies would have to come from Washington, but declared "I think they should be burned where they are."

He said the final recommendation of the State board of health must be made by Dr. Henry Hanson, State health officer now in the Keys.

Investigations Launched.

Federal Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins, who sent Aubrey Williams into the storm zone as his representative; State Attorney G. A. Worley, and the American Legion all launched investigations into weather bureau reports and relief train movements.

Worley began questioning witnesses at once, but said he had "formed no conclusions" after interviewing the first witnesses. Williams flew after Gov. Sholtz into the storm zone.

At Jacksonville, en route to Miami, he said:

"We mean to follow this thing relentlessly and let the chips fall where they may. If any of our men are to blame we want to know it."

Just how many died when roaring winds sent walls of water pounding across the narrow coral formations stretching finger-like down toward Key West none yet knows.

Of 817 veterans encamped in three rehabilitation camps, the Red Cross today reported 320 missing. It said 144 bodies had been recovered. Over 100 of them were unidentified. Known survivors numbered 375, of whom 71 were injured. Civilians dead were estimated at 70.

100 Unidentified.

A hero's funeral here was promised for those broken bodies brought out of the keys. One hundred and thirty-two of them lay in the Miami morgue and funeral homes, over 100 of them unidentified.

Col. George E. Ijams, representative of the Veterans Bureau, said public funeral services would be held here "within the next few days" with full military honors, ranking officers of all branches of the service attending. Those identified will be buried where relatives request. Those unidentified will rest in some national cemetery.

While the howling hurricane that crossed the keys beat up Florida's West Coast and blew northward to head out to sea through Maryland, leaving three dead and heavy property damage outside Florida in its wake, some unofficial sources here suggested evacuation of the keys once rescue and relief work were ended.

However, Conrad Van Hyning, State relief director, said uninjured persons would be permitted to carry on there. All persons injured have been removed and placed in hospitals, he said.

Benton E. Jacobs, Associated Press staff writer, who flew into and out of the storm area today, declared conditions appalling.

"Bodies of men who only last week were carefree human beings," he said, "were piled high along the path of that devastating blow—bodies with arms outstretched as if in agonized supplication, contorted, almost too long dead to handle."

He quoted one man helping direct relief workers as saying they knew where "upwards of 100 more bodies" were yet to be located. Jacobs said fear of disease prevailed.

Dixie Still Aground.

Fresh relief parties, in automobiles and boats, pushed into the shambles from Miami southward and Key West northward, while reports to the Red Cross from lower Matecumbe, isolated as the storm smashed rail and highway communications, said the situation there was "clearing up slowly."

Along the Florida coast, shipping approached normalcy again, but two vessels still lay hard aground.

Jammed on French Reef south of Miami was the 8,100-ton Morgan liner Dixie, settling deeper into the sand while efforts to dislodge her were being discussed. Farther south, off the keys, was the little Danish steamer Leise Maersk. The tanker G. B. Watson awaited off Clearwater, her motor stalled and steering gear helpless. Coast Guard vessels stood by the Dixie and Leise Maersk.

The oil tanker Vacuum hove to 120 miles off Cape Henry in 55-mile-an-hour winds as the storm blew itself out in the Atlantic.

Writ Plea Weighed In Race Bets Case

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 6—An early decision on the petition of Harry D. Miggins, held under $1,000 bond on a bookmaking charge, for a writ of habeas corpus is expected following testimony before Judge David A. Robb yesterday at Cumberland.

Miggins, whose place was raided two weeks ago, is awaiting grand jury action.

In seeking a writ, counsel for Miggins attacked the constitutionality of the Washington County anti-bookmaking law passed by the last General Assembly.

Judge Robb denied two previous petitions of Miggins earlier in the week because at that time Miggins was free on bond. When Miggins appeared in court yesterday, he was in the custody of Sheriff Max Malott.

gust 14, according to the statement, and finally Mrs. Meluch produced a revolver.

In the ensuing struggle, he got possession of the gun "and hit her on the head four or five times with the butt end. She fell to the floor and when I tried to feel her pulse I got blood on my shirt and pants.

"I changed my pants, went downstairs and got a clean shirt from my sister, Margaret, and then went to my dad's shoe repair shop and borrowed $1.50 from him."

The statement said he then returned to the room where the killing occurred, gathered up a few personal belongings and left on a trip that took him to Grand Rapids, Mich.; Detroit, and finally here. He threw the gun away.

Meluch said he began correspondence last January with the young woman he was to marry, then Dorothy Flowers, of Dearborn, Mich., after he had obtained her name and address from a correspondence club at Gray's Lake, Ill. He saw her for the first time June 25, he said, when he visited her at Dearborn. A week later they were married and a short time later moved to Lorain to live with his parents.

Chief speaker at the Council session was Marte Gomez, of Mexico, who warned Italy that the American nations can not recognize territorial conquests.

Gomez called attention to a declaration of the American countries, dated August 3, 1932, providing that territorial changes wrought forcibly shall not be recognized.

The Mexican member urged that the Covenant be applied in full to the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. He assured Italy that Mexico has an animus toward Italy, to whom she is bound by common ties, but "as long as the slightest chance of success remains within the Covenant, it should be exhausted."

Police Launch Search For Cigarette Thieves

Maryland, Virginia and District police joined hands last night in a search for thieves who robbed a Southern Railway train of nearly 10,000 cartons of cigarettes in Lynchburg, Va., Thursday night.

The men are thought to be riding in the two cars in which they made their escape.

Capt. A. W. Wood, of the Southern Railway police, said the men work out of Baltimore and are wanted in connection with several cases of robbery during the past month.

WASHINGTON'S HOME NEWSPAPER

Pause in Rise Hailed as Spur To Prosperity

Babson, Less Optimistic, Holds That Budget Must Be Balanced.

By Claude A. Jagger,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, Sept. 6.—Wall Street greeted President Roosevelt's announcement today that a "breathing spell for industry is here" by breathing a big sigh of relief.

Leading bankers and industrialists were chary of formal comment, but a number said privately that relief from the uncertainties arising from far-reaching reform measures was what business most needed for recovery.

The stock market finally turned upward, after a morning of hesitancy, and scored numerous gains of $1 to $3 a share in steels, motors and miscellaneous industrials.

Among the few who commented publicly were F. E. Williamson, president of the New York Central, who said the breathing spell policy "would be very helpful to business."

Less enthusiastic was Roger D. Babson, noted business statistician, who said in Boston that business needed more than a breathing spell, that the budget should be balanced, taxation reduced and living costs kept down. He added, however, that "business does need a breathing spell."

Relief to Business.

Dr. Lionel D. Edie, Wall street economist, said the President's statement would be "a great relief to business."

Some brokerage quarters in Wall street recalled that a few of the recent bulls in the stock market had been basing their optimism on the theory that the Administration, now that the "reform" session of Congress has ended, would take the very attitude which the President today suggested. These bulls felt that the President kept Congress in session all summer to jam through his reform program to leave the slate free of disturbing legislation next year.

In view of the vigorous rise in the stock market yesterday and the day before, however, many traders were inclined to think such improvement in the outlook as was in sight had been pretty well discounted.

In the share market, Chrysler rose more than $2 to around $67, a new high for recent years. General Motors advanced more than $1 to $45, one block of 10,000 shares appearing on the ticker tape as a single transaction. U. S. Steel got up about $1 to around $46, and Bethlehem and National Steels registered similar gains. Shares up about $2 included Johns Manville, Dupont, Case and a few others. Rails perked up early, then lost part of their rise. Oils were inclined to sag for a time.

Transamerica Retires Acquired Securities

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—John M. Grant, president of Transamerica Corporation, announced today that it was the intention of the management to cancel $439,467 shares of capital stock retired to the treasury since the first of this year and an additional 1,147,970 shares previously acquired.

"It is also the intention," said Grant, "to cancel 77,175 shares reserved for exchanges. This will reduce the total number of issued shares of capital stock of Transamerica Corporation from 24,847,484 to 23,182,874 and will increase the equity of the stockholders proportionately."

Hide Prices Reach Year's High Levels

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—A fresh buying movement of hides in the Chicago market has resulted in the establishment of new high levels for the current year, and prices equaling the 1934 tops, according to trade sources.

Light native cows sold at 11 cents a pound, up ½ cent from the previous level, and branded cows were traded at 10½ cents, up ¼ cent.

Curb Seat off $5,000.

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—A New York Curb Exchange seat was reported sold today for $22,500, a decrease of $5,000 from the last transfer.

Foreign Markets.

London—Geneva developments dampened the previous hopeful feeling on the stock exchange today and induced traders to halt buying, which caused recent fashionable, international, industrial and rubber shares held steady while transatlantic issues recovered from early dullness. The market closed steady.

Paris—Traders were hesitant on the bourse today awaiting results from the League of Nations, and rentes declined fractionally. International issues moved irregularly. The closing was inactive.

Government Orders $500,000 Reos

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 6.—Receipt of another Government order aggregating more than $500,000 worth of speed wagons is announced by Don E. Bates, president of the Reo Motor Car Co. This order calls for 642 chassis and delivery must be made within 10 days. Production in the Reo plant has been stepped up to meet this emergency. The trucks are for the Department of Agriculture.

Reserve Funds Dip, Reversing Recent Trend

Balances Show Decline of $118,000,000 in Weekly Report.

Reversing the recent rapid climb which has carried member reserves to record figures, a drop of $118,000,000 in member bank reserve balances was shown yesterday in the weekly condition statement of the Federal Reserve Banks.

The decrease was attributed largely to a substantial gain in money in circulation over the Labor Day week-end and a transfer of funds to the Treasury. Money in circulation jumped $77,000,000.

The Federal Reserve Board calculated member reserves in excess of legal requirements declined $110,000,000 to approximately $2,670,000,000. Monetary gold stock of the country increased $12,000,000 to a new peak of $9,209,000,000. The Reserve statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended September 4, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,478,000,000, an increase of $4,000,000, compared with the preceding week and of $8,000,000, compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On September 4 total reserve bank credit amounted to $2,472,000,000, an increase of $1,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $77,000,000 in money in circulation and $63,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve Banks and a decrease of $13,000,000 in Treasury and National Bank currency."

Board Seat $120,000, Advance of $15,000

New York, Sept. 6. (AP)—Arrangements have been made for the sale of a New York Stock Exchange membership at $120,000, an advance of $15,000 from the previous transaction.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

	Fri.	Thurs.
Advances	491	529
Declines	194	135
Unchanged	149	152
Total issues	834	816

Stocks—Pushed ahead to new 1935 highs after Roosevelt's "Breathing Spell" message. Best showing made by car loadings since 1931, although not released until after the market close, was anticipated. Turnover at 2,155,100 shares was the best since August 27.

Bonds—Higher prices prevailed in all sections of the list with the exception of the Federals. Main body of domestic issues was in good demand with low-priced rails and utilities the bright spots. Transfers gained slightly to $13,358,000.

Curb—Prices followed the trend of the "big board" and closed moderately higher in active trading, which totaeld 424,000 shares, against 331,000 on Thursday.

Grains—A new high for the season recorded at Minneapolis and a 2-cent rise at Winnipeg resulted in higher closing prices. September wheat was 90. Corn and oats were steady.

Cotton—The undertone was even in trade buying and covering with net advances of 4 to 8 points. October closed at 10.40.

Sugar—Raw sugar was steady and unchanged at 3.45. Refined closed at 5.10 for fine granulated.

Bar silver—Unchanged in New York at 65¾ cents per ounce. In London last prices were up ⅛d to 29 3-16d (64.99 cents).

Standard Power Gains 7.1 Per Cent in Year

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Electric output of Standard Gas & Electric Co. for the week ended August 31, 1935, totaled 87,363,042 kilowatt-hours, an increase of 7.1 per cent, compared with the corresponding week last year.

Woolworth Sales Up 3.6 Per Cent in Year

New York, Sept. 6. (AP)—Sales of F. W. Woolworth Co., for August were $1,556,358, an increase of 3.6 per cent over the $20,797,935 reported for August 1934.

For the first eight months sales amounted to $132,122,887 compared with $164,138,933, in the same period last year, a decrease of 1.2 per cent.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stock Market Resumes Advance on Favorable Interpretation of 'Breathing Spell'; Grains Are Higher, Cotton Steady.

By Victor Eubank,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Sept. 6.—Spurred by news that was interpreted as "good," the stock market resumed its advancing stride today and many issues reached new peaks for 1935.

President Roosevelt's statement that industry was in for a "breathing spell" in the matter of administrative reforms helped to stimulate bullish forces. The close was firm. Transfers approximated 2,200,000 shares.

The list got off to a rather hesitant start as Wall Street analysts studied the presidential communication setting forth new thoughts on the New Deal. Buying in the rails soon began, however, and it was not long before the motors, steels, utilities and specialtes joined the upward push.

Profit Taking Appears.

While buying was confident, it was notably cautious, and the ticker tape was seldom pushed to its limit. Profit taking appeared in late dealings and a number of the leaders shaded their gains. There were also a few soft spots and the oils were backward.

Wheat and the other grains rallied and dipped and cotton did not get very far. Secondary bonds were in demand, while United States Governments were listless. Sterling sagged in foreign exchange transactions.

Shares of Homestake Mining climbed 7 points and Case, Johns-Manville, Chrysler and Westinghouse were up about 3 each. Others up fractions to around 2 points included United States Steel, Bethlehem, American Rolling Mill, Inland Steel, General Motors, Auburn, Du Pont, General Electric, Western Union, Consolidated Gas, Deere, Electric Auto-Lite, Murray Corporation, Greyhound Corporation, Santa Fe, New York Central, Delaware & Hudson, Southern Pacific and American Smelting.

Liggett & Myers "B" dropped 2 points and Safeway Stores, Douglas Aircraft, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Coca-Cola were moderately under water.

Investment Companies Declare Dividends

New York, Sept. 6.—Directors of Capital Administration Co., Ltd., have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share on the preferred stock, Series A, payable October 1 to stockholders of record September 16.

Directors of the Broad Street Investnig Co., Inc., have declared a quarterly dividend of 20 cents a share on the capital stock, payable October 1 to stockholders of record September 16.

Cotton Is Steady, 4 to 8 Points Up

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 6.—While somewhat irregular, cotton showed an even undertone today on trade buying and covering. The market closed steady at net advances of 4 to 8 points. Overnight selling orders from the South prevented a full response to relatively firm Liverpool cables at the opening. After showing early net gains of 4 to 8 points, prices eased under realizing or liquidation.

Lowest Power Rate In New York Village

Penn Yan, N. Y., Sept. 6 (AP)—H. Allen Wagener, president of the Penn Yan Municipal Board announced today a reduction in electric rates by the Municipal Electric plant, giving this village what he described as the lowest rates in New York State and probably in the entire country. The new charges are 50 cents for the first 15 kilowatt hours, 2½ cents each for the next 385 hours and 2 cents each for the next 400 hours.

For several years the Municipal Board has given a receipted bill to all customers as a Christmas present.

Phillips Petroleum Forms New Unit

New York, Sept. 6.—Frank Phillips, president of Phillips Petroleum Co., announces that his company has organized a new corporation, known as The Polymerization Process Corporation, through which patent licenses will be available to the petroleum and natural gas industries for the practice of the polymerization process for making premium grade gasoline from refinery and natural gases.

Through exchange of patents, the Texas Corporation, Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), and Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey have an interest in the new corporation and will use the new process.

Gen. Electric Lifts Dividend Rate 33 1-3%

Quarterly Distribution Is Increased From 15 to 20 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 6.—Directors of General Electric Co. today ordered a quarterly dividend of 20 cents, compared with 15 cents, which had been paid since the second quarter of 1934.

This represents the second increase in the disbursements to common stock holders since the depression hit bottom. Establishment of a 15-cent quarterly rate last year came after two years of paying only 10 cents.

The present shares were created by a 4-for-1 split-up in 1930. In 1931, a quarterly dividend rate of 40 cents a share was maintained. Today's disbursement is payable October 25 to stock of record September 27.

Leon Fraser on Board.

New York, Sept. 6 (AP). — Leon Fraser, former head of the Bank for International Settlements at Basel, was today elected a director of the General Electric Co.

This represented the first important corporate directorship for the youngish American who recently came to Wall street as an officer of the First National Bank, after making his mark in banking in Europe.

Outside Markets Advance Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Influenced by a 2-cent bulge at Winnipeg and by a new top price season record at Minneapolis, the Chicago wheat market today averaged higher. Contributing to wheat strength were reports that Russia had got rid of most of her grain surplus to Italy, and thus had curtailed prospective supplies available to other European countries from Canada. The amount reported as thus disposed of by Russia was estimated as approximately 27,750,000 bushels of wheat and more than 8,000,000 bushels of oats and barley.

Wheat in Chicago closed unsettled, ⅛-½ above yesterday's finish; December, 92¾-98½; corn, 1 cent off to ⅜ up; December, 56¼-56¼; oats, unchanged to ¼ higher, and provisions 2 to 20 cents down.

Halt To Collect Wounded.

In replying to a letter addressed to him by a pronouncedly sympathetic newspaper publisher, President Roosevelt acknowledges "a positive duty to clarify our purposes, to describe our methods and to reiterate our ideals." But instead of so doing he again lets loose a barrage of those confused generalizations which the public is unfortunately coming to expect from him.

Indeed, in the reply to Roy Howard the President indulges his penchant for meaningless analogies to an unusual extent and thereby helps to conceal the absence of precise and definite statements in the assurance which was asked. References to sceptics who refused to enter Noah's ark, and allusions to motor cars that knock because they need carbon removed, do not answer the inquiries of those who realize that a clear exposition of Administration objectives is imperative.

Apart from optimistic assertions that "doubts and misapprehension will vanish" as the "essential outline" of what has been done "rises into view," the President has little to offer in the way of positive assurances. Business may derive some negative comfort from his statement that the basic legislative program has reached "substantial completion" and that the breathing spell to which Mr. Howard referred in his letter is "very decidedly" here. On the other hand a rather disturbing suggestion is conveyed by that very phrase "breathing spell," which implies that only a respite from legislative experiments of the New Deal type is contemplated. However, the President does make some acknowledgement of the growing criticism of his legislative drive when he concedes that a halt is essential to allow for recuperation.

In trying to refute charges that the new tax bill aims at punishment rather than revenue, Mr. Roosevelt takes refuge behind certain imposing but empty phrases concerning the necessity of restraining the growth of "unwholesome and sterile" accumulations of capital. He ignores the fact that confiscatory taxes upon wealth likewise tax out of existence individual and corporate accumulations invested in productive enterprises beneficial to the community. Furthermore, his assumption that large corporations possess relatively greater ability to pay than smaller ones is in conflict with easily ascertainable facts.

The assertion that the Administration came into power pledged to a "very considerable legislative program" completely overlooks the glaring conflict between the President's pre-election promises and the policies subsequently decided upon. Under the circumstances, it is hard to place much reliance upon mere statements that we are going forward and that there is nothing to fear. Business will doubtless be encouraged by the knowledge that fresh legislative blows are not in immediate prospect. There will be time, in other words, to assess the damage done before further demolition is undertaken.

Maj. Brown's Request.

As the District Crime Committee stated in its able and fearless report, "merely strengthening the Police Department and enacting new laws" will not remedy the city's crime situation if inefficient and incompetent officials are left in charge. Nevertheless vigorous enforcement of the law is impossible unless the police force is adequate. And the Crime Committee asserts that "there is beyond any question of doubt ample proof that more men are needed."

In asking for an increase in budgetary appropriations to permit of an addition of 116 men to the Police Department, Maj. Brown, therefore, makes a request that is hard to gainsay. The increase suggested is well below the total recommended by the Crime Committee and is doubtless much below the figure that could be justified in view of the recent rapid rise in population and the growing traffic congestion. During the past five years, Maj. Brown points out that no net additions have been made to personnel, as the 35 men allowed under the last appropriation were assigned to jobs made vacant by the economy act.

Considering Washington's unviable crime record, and the mounting list of traffic accidents, the need for a larger police force appears self-evident. Until reasonable demands for expansion are satisfied, moreover, the Police Department will always have a ready and a legitimate excuse for its failure to make the Nation's Capital as safe a place of residence as other communities of comparable size and less importance.

After The Tragedy.

Two letters to the editor, printed on the page opposite, accuse The Post of taking a callous attitude toward the veterans who lost their lives in the Florida hurricane disaster. We regret that our editorial of September 5 could possibly have been so misunderstood. It was not lack of sympathy for the victims of the storm that called forth those comments, but a desire for correction of the little advertised conditions which made this disaster possible.

In spite of Relief Administrator Hopkins' denial that his organization was negligent in failing to evacuate the veterans on the Florida keys, there is considerable evidence to support Gov. Sholtz's conclusion that "gross carelessness somewhere" was responsible. Indeed, the negligence seems to trace far back of the hurricane to the casual policy of assembling "bonus marchers" in isolated and semi-secret concentration camps. This point we shall again take occasion to emphasize. Sympathy for the victims of this catastrophe would be pitifully misplaced if it should preclude the most serious consideration of the issue which the destruction of the Florida camps has brought to public attention.

To many Americans the first news of these camps' existence came with the horrible reports of their demolition. Contrary to its usual practice, the FERA has not publicized this enterprise. Veterans who came to Washington to demand immediate payment of the bonus have been quietly shipped to remote localities under conditions which approximate paying them not to create disturbances. Reports that the FERA has tried to shift the camps to the CCC indicate that it is not proud of this undertaking. Nor has it any reason to be. The camps were launched without any direct legislative sanction. At best they represent a surreptitious and ill-considered approach to a very difficult problem.

Appreciation for the wartime sacrifices of these men must not encourage blindness to the deficiencies of a social policy which fails to forward their present welfare. The Government maintains dozens of veterans' hospitals and homes especially equipped to rehabilitate unfortunate victims of war. Apparently the only reason for creating these special "rehabilitation camps" in the South was to avoid the political embarrassment of further mass lobbying for the bonus. Of course, that very fact put a premium on "trouble-making" in the camps.

Reports that conditions in some of the camps are "intolerable" come from those who have been there. It is further asserted that many of the camps have become focal centers of communistic agitation, which was certainly to be expected. Capt. E. R. Denny, in charge of the Blâney, S. C., camp, was quoted some weeks ago as stating that about one-half of the veterans under his care are psychopathic and neurological cases, about 10 per cent victims of "depression shock" and the rest drifters and agitators. The problems thus indicated can not be solved by emotional reaction. Real concern for the veterans' welfare requires that for the demoralization of these camps should be substituted careful hospitalization for the unfit and constructive employment for the healthy.

A policy which tends to hide these problems from public view, segregating these unfortunate veterans under conditions which hold little promise for their rehabilitation, is one in which we can find nothing to admire. President Roosevelt might well extend his probe into alleged negligence immediately preceding this disaster, with the object of ascertaining whether the fundamental blunder does not run much farther back.

The Forgotten City.

After a talk with Mayor Kelly of Chicago, President Roosevelt is reported to have tentatively approved the allocation of $50,000,000 to that city for work-relief projects. Among the undertakings which figured in the negotiations is an $8,600,000 lake-front airport.

If such a fund is allocated for a gigantic, modern landing field in Chicago, it will surprise no one outside of Washington. New York is planning to use $1,600,000 of its work-relief fund for improvement of Floyd Bennett Field. Many other cities are doing likewise. In fact, airports are among the favorite projects at WPA headquarters. Large sums are being allocated for improvements, extensions, modernization and safety features. Here is an opportunity for every city in the country—except Washington—to acquire a first-class aviation field, if it does not already possess one.

The Capital City is ineligible for such a grant because it does not own an airport site. That, of course, is not the fault of the District. Congress has wrangled over the subject every time it has been considered, without reaching any conclusion. When the House did come to the point of passing an airport bill at the last session it voted to assess the entire cost against the District, in spite of the fact that other cities, with far less claim upon Federal aid, are being given 45 per cent of the money required to develop their landing fields and are borrowing the other 55 per cent from the Government.

The irony of this situation falls upon Washington residents with a disconcerting thud. This city has one of the poorest airports of any large American municipality. Its need for a modern commercial landing field is the more acute because of the multifold activities of national importance now centered in the Capital. Yet the Federal Government is offering to finance safe and adequate air terminals in any American city, except voteless Washington. Is it surprising that another link between politics and work-relief is seen by detached observers?

A Magnified CWA.

Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, admits that he would not be "surprised" if his organization had rejected 2,000 projects approved by the PWA, calling for outlays of $350,000,000. There is no hint that Mr. Hopkins regrets or deplores the rebuffs thus administered to the agency headed by Secretary Ickes. He merely explains that some rejected undertakings were located in areas where the relief rolls were not large enough to justify the outlay while the cost of others was too great in proportion to employment prospects.

If Mr. Hopkins clings to his resolution to provide jobs for 3,500,000 persons within the next few weeks and to keep them at work for a year with the resources at his command, he can not of course approve projects entailing large outlays for materials and supplies. The sum of $4,000,000,000 leaves little margin for anything except wage payments if the Hopkins goal is to be reached. Consequently, a conflict between the Works Progress Administration, now clearly little more than another CWA, and the Public Works Administration appears to be inevitable.

The latter agency is not concerned to provide a maximum number of new jobs for men on relief rolls, but to finance useful construction projects that will indirectly create employment by stimulating demand for the products of the heavy industries. Overhead costs per man employed are on the average high for an organization like the PWA. Moreover, public works have to be carefully planned and deliberately carried out, if projects are to be both useful and economical. The quick and spectacular results desired by Mr. Hopkins are neither obtainable nor desirable.

Incidentally it is surprising that despite the emphasis placed upon speed, the Works Progress Administration has so little to show for its efforts to transfer men from relief rolls. Excluding youths in CCC camps, 300,000 of whom were on Government pay rolls before the WPA began to operate, only 318,000 additional jobs have been provided. However, if the relief instead of the work aspect of the new program is regarded as paramount, the Hopkins organization surely has the ingenuity to discover or invent tasks capable of giving some kind of employment to 3,500,000 persons. The CWA did not exhaust the possibilities of made work of varying degrees of usefulness.

If the ideas of Mr. Hopkins prevail, this is, indeed, the only policy that can be followed. The PWA will in that case be relegated to a position of relative obscurity, and the valuable work done by the National Resources Board in developing a co-ordinated national program of public works with the aid of State and local authorities will be of little present value.

However, when the $4,000,000,000 fund is exhausted with little to show for the outlay except an addition to the Federal debt and with the problem of finding permanent work for the idle still unsolved, the long-range plans of those who conceive of a relief program in terms of useful projects may be taken from the shelves.

Epic Of The Dixie.

When the last of the 231 passengers aboard the grounded liner Dixie was safely removed, the whole country breathed a sigh of relief. A series of disasters to American coastwise shipping in recent years had led the public to fear the worst. That the peril was in this case terminated without any loss of life is a tribute to the courage and resourcefulness of the captain and crew of the stricken vessel, as well as to the ever-ready Coast Guard and private vessels that participated in the rescue.

Aside from the successful outcome there is an aspect of this dramatic encounter between man at his best and the sea at its worst that is worthy of attention. In face of what appeared to be probable death there was no panic or hysteria. There was no delay in sending out the S O S. Despite injuries, Capt. Sundstrom was in complete control throughout the storm and the long battle for safety after the Dixie had grounded on French Reef. Discipline among the crew was excellent. Passengers are lavish in their praise of the "unflinching courage" of the seamen from captain down.

These heartening reports stand out in sharp contrast with the tales of disorganization, panic and consequent disaster that have marked other recent accidents to the American merchant marine. No doubt the valiant Capt. Sundstrom, a sailor of the old school, would have maintained the finest sea traditions in any event. Nevertheless, the recent investigations and the increased vigilance of the Steamboat Inspection Service may have been influential in bringing about this splendid exhibition of morale.

Pleasing as the Dixie rescue is, it does not of course minimize the necessity of enacting modern safety-at-sea legislation. Many a Congressman should have suffered twinges of remorse during the long hours when the Dixie's passengers were in danger. It is to be hoped that the good resolutions which then must have been formed will not be forgotten by next January.

Letters To The Editor.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Open To Change.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice that you still receive occasional letters that evince a measure of soreness at the recent decisions of the Supreme Court finding certain of the so-called recovery legislation unconstitutional. These letters in some instances criticize the Court and in others the provisions of the Constitution which formed the basis for the decisions. All dwell upon the fact that great changes in economic factors have taken place since the Constitution was adopted, with the inference that the instrument or the courts, or both, have not kept pace with the growing necessities. One writer goes so far as to say that the President and Congress should be the sole judges of the constitutionality of laws, since they are elected by the people, while the Judges of the Supreme Court are not.

Of course, no criticism of this character is entitled to serious consideration unless accompanied by an adequate discussion of the provisions of the Constitution for its own amendment. It is not reasonable to assume that the framers of the Constitution were not mindful of the fact that the world, including the demands of governments, were changing and would continue to change. Indeed, they were then dealing with perhaps the greatest change proposed up to that time.

Although they could not foresee all that has happened in the succeeding years, they had the benefit of some thousands of years of history. They clearly realized that changes in the Constitution would be necessary, but were warranted in drawing the conclusion from history that such changes would be in detail rather than in principle. Unfortunately, human nature has not changed materially since the time of Nebuchadnezzar.

In providing for amendment of the Constitution, the framers endeavored to guard against hasty action, and history has shown that the requirements for deliberation were not excessive. Let us call to mind the more recent amendments: Election of United States Senators by general poll instead of State Legislatures, prohibition of the liquor traffic, enfranchisement of women, and repeal of prohibition, coupled with a preposterous provision for the protection of dry States. All of these changes had, and still have, their opponents, but the latter have at least the satisfaction of knowing that the changes were made after full opportunity for deliberation.

It will be very fortunate if the issues of the next Presidential campaign shall be such as to induce a full popular discussion and examination of the principles and framework of our Government.

Nothing To Worry About.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Well, well, the country can breathe easier now. In an Associated Press article which appeared on the front page of The Post of September 4 was set forth a statement by President Roosevelt that he now is "not much worried about the future of the United States." He went on to state that certain repairs were being made to the old wreck, but that it was in nowise changed. Wonder what Thomas Jefferson would say to that?

As to not being much worried, no doubt he isn't. He won't be around as long as the younger generation upon whom the initial burden of paying for the New Deal "repair work" will fall. The final reckoning for the stupendous debt he has caused to pile up will not be dropped in his mailbox nor those of his generation. That'll be something for the next generation, and the next ad infinitum, to figure out. And all as a result of New Deal inspired and ballyhooed "Government generosity." Like a man being handed a swell present by his wife and receiving the bill for it later.

As to the repairs—well, he likened them to the repairs being made on the White House. Only he neglected to point out that these latter are real repairs, not experiments, and that the repairmen are real mechanics who know their business, not crystal gazers and soothsayers. Much of the inexcusable high cost of these legislative repairs has been justified by the New Deal propaganda loud speaker through the use of the old experiment gag: If it works, think how much better off we'll be (though they avoid pointing out we'll have to foot the bill in any case), and if it doesn't, well, remember it was done with the best of intentions. About as smart as a home owner allowing somebody to paint his house with a substance he alleges will make it fireproof, and then letting him set fire to it to see if it will work.

As to his remark that there have been no changes—no, of course not, unless you can say that making the Government into a wet nurse for the American public is a change; or setting it up in business in competition with private business is a change; or putting persons into positions to run things as they see fit without the sanction of the voters is a change.

Oh, no, nothing to be worried about; like the intrepid lion hunter remarked as he pulled a bead on one of the beasts an instant before he discovered the gun wasn't loaded. E. N. BLYE.

Intellectual Freedom.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is America a land of free speech and free thought? I am beginning to doubt it. Recent investigations into the alleged teaching of communism in our universities will, if not stopped, lead to dire consequences. I am not a Communist. And yet I believe there should be presented to our people, and especially to the rising generation, both sides of the economic picture.

What if communistic doctrines do emanate from Moscow? Were democratic ideas, in the early days of our republic, autochthonous to the American continent? Thomas Jefferson and his ilk, to whom our so-called patriotic Americans refer with excessive verve, received their ideas in large part from France. Jefferson, in his day, was as much a radical as the most enthusiastic reds in America are today.

If our land is one of freedom, let us keep it so. Surely, we do not want American education laced up in the strait-jacket prepared for it by American Fascists. Athens murdered Socrates for the crime of helping boys to think for themselves. Huss was burned at the stake for daring to oppose the accepted and well-nigh universal opinion of mankind. Tennessee persecuted Scopes for the crime of teaching the truth.

Will historians of future generations regard America as a land of intellectual stagnation, or as a torchbearer leading the world out of the morass of a moribund economic order? PLEBIAN.

The Tragedy In Florida.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Could you not have delayed a day or two the publication of your editorial on "Ruin in the Veterans' Camps?"

I do not urge the old and kindly "de mortuis nil nisi bonum," except with the amendment "until they are buried." Your vigorous style with its "drifters" and "trouble makers" and its quoted "hell-raisers" resounds strangely as a requiem over the twisted and silent figures on the Florida Keys.

If they were not as capable or healthy or lucky as some of us, couldn't the commentators wait until we, their comrades of 1917-18, had heard taps over the grave where their broken bodies will rest with their broken hopes?

MARY MEARES GALT.
Women's Overseas Service League (Washington Unit).
September 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Everyone in Washington understands that The Post is vociferous in its opposition to the soldiers' bonus, but is it necessary to attack the hundreds of dead veterans in Florida to carry on your fight?

All the news accounts we have read of what these veterans have been doing in Florida associate them with the construction of a road across the keys, and I have seen a few photographs indicating that such a road was being built. Such being the case, how do you reconcile your statements that the veterans were living a life of lazy ease down there, riotous, brawling and drinking? I cannot reconcile the pictures of the construction done to date with your statement that those in the veteran camps have been doing nothing but living off the Government and are there to keep them from annoying Washington.

Even if what you say was true, and the facts do not make the case anywhere near as hard against them as you picture it, after all it was these men, and their ilk, that went to France and fought your battle in 1917 and 1918, and the least you could do is respect them in their untimely deaths.

I have spent a little time vacationing in the section where these veteran camps were located and I wouldn't call the location a very desirable one to laze in, much less work. I can think of many much more desirable spots. Washington editorial does, with even their summer heat are much more preferable. HARRY W. HASS.

Apollo Was A Rat-Killer.

Post Office, Saturday.

IT would seem that the bull-terrier is "coming in again"—at least in England. He ought to—he is as British as the bulldog.

We wonder how long it will be before the bull-terrier comes in again in America. It shouldn't be so very long: he inherits the bulldog's stubborn courage and capacity for what Shirley Povich and all of us boys from Bath, Me., call "knock-taking"—and he adds to those sterling qualities the energy, agility and wit of the terrier.

Like many a great family, that of the bull-terrier has had radical ups and downs. Like many such families, it gained its first prominence by means which would now be accounted disreputable. Like certain human clans that we could name, the Clan Bull-Terrier suffered a decline slow, yet lengthy. Nevertheless, like several such clans, it was bound to retrieve its ancient honors.

Time was when Merrie England's merriest merriment consisted of bull-baiting. The friends of this sport contended that it nourished a manly spirit in the British breast, but a puny Parliament banned the game, and high hearts had to devise a substitute. They devised the dog-fight in a pugilistic ring; they appended rat-killing in steep-sided pits. So they needed brave dogs—and the bulldog will transmit bravery to any descendant. They wanted, also, dogs that were intelligent—and the terrier has brains. After certain less fortunate experiments, they struck on a cross between the bulldog and the terrier.

Beauty was another matter. In fact, it didn't—then—matter. The sporting gentlemen gladly sacrificed good looks to qualities more (well, so they were considered in those degenerate days, Mrs. Kestler) masculine.

Not that they lacked even a literary appeal. After all, Homer's Apollo—old god of music and of poetry—was "The Rat-Killer." More than a hundred years ago, gentle Sir Walter Scott became "much attached" to "Camp," who was what the Wizard of the North called "a bulldog-terrier." And was this merely because Sir Walter liked all sorts of dogs and kept so many of them? Then how about Charles Stuart Calverley, who, though of later date, was nearly as good poet as parodist? In his Cambridge undergraduate days, he loved few amusements better than that of turning his terrier—who must have had a good deal of bulldog in him—loose upon a rat carefully captured for such slaughter.

For long, however, the raising of bull-terriers was an amateur, even a haphazard, affair. Then, in the sixties of the last century somebody bethought him that there might be profit in their cultivation as a distinctive breed. The thought proved quickly profitable.

* * *

At first puppies were "of all colors found in the bulldog." But soon that incomparable dog-fancier, the late James Hinks, of Birmingham—we have the word of the London Times' kennel-expert for it—"addressed himself to the task of breeding all-whites." England—which loves to form clubs as America loves to form lodges—formed a Bull Terrier Club.

It endured, through varying fortunes until today.

And today, if you please, it is yet again fortunate.

There is, one should note, a minor branch of the family, which has long prospered over here and is now beginning to attract attention in England: the Staffordshire bull-terriers, in whom the white patches are almost accidental. But "less progress has been made," according to the expert we have already liberally quoted, "with the attempts to produce miniatures, which would be pleasing dogs if they were reproductions of the larger kind."

* * *

Well, we knew one. His name was "Paddy." He wouldn't have like to be called "pleasing." But he was, in every detail, a "reproduction of the larger kind."

Anyhow, as long ago as 1861, Meyrick wrote: "For every quality which makes the dog a valued companion to man, the bull-terrier is unsurpassed by any other breed. He will hunt for him, watch his house, and fight for him; he is teachable and intelligent; he is the best tempered companion and the most faithful friend."

* * *

THE WHIPPING POST.

We have, in our own paper, the Associated Press' own word for it: "These sources said the question of sanctions would surely be pigeonholed because of the unsavory light which Italy expects to throw on Ethiopia."—Now that sources are talking, they might go further and tell us whether they prefer an unsavory light to an unsightly sound.

Crash in Comfort.

New York, Sept. 6.

THE news rushes past in a great hurry, but it would gratify a legitimate curiosity if the aerial transportation lines, so confiding about the comfort and speed of their ships, would follow up accidents to the big transport planes with certain explanations.

One such crash occurred recently in the Southwest when a Douglas, which is said to be one of the two most reliable transport planes in the world, was compelled to sit down with a load of passengers because a fuel line had clogged. The pilot apparently did a fine job of putting his ship back on the ground, considering conditions. The wings were sheared off by some trees, but nobody was killed or even seriously hurt.

The Douglas and the Boeing have received public confidence on the representation that they can not only fly but take off, loaded, on one engine. In fact, the Douglas which made the inaugural flight on the Newark-New Orleans route a few months ago was compelled to fly some distance on one engine when the other one began to hammer due to some disorder in the oiling system. This ship returned to Washington and landed.

But the account of the crash in the Southwest suggests that, although the Douglas can rise and fly on one engine, both engines depend on one fuel line and must fail together if a block occurs. If this is so, it is a condition which will offset much upholstery and soundproofing, and the point is one which was overlooked in the explanations which followed the accident.

• • • •

AGAIN, the other day, in California, a Boeing with only her crew of three on board had trouble taking off, turned back, struck some wires and burned. The accounts of the wreck said both engines had just been overhauled, but added that one or both motors were misfiring. Here, again, a ship rated as able to rise and fly on one engine failed when called upon to meet the emergency, but no further explanation appears.

Twice in the last few months trimotored ships have lost an engine in the air.

One made a remarkable return to Washington—a distance of about 80 miles—and came down, but the other crashed and burned. I am citing from routine newspaper accounts of the moment. But there followed no attempt to explain why the engines had shaken themselves free, and the customer who reads the folders discovers nothing in them covering a point which surely is no less interesting than the fact that sandwiches and coffee may be had at 15,000 feet. Perhaps they don't know why engines hop out, but even that would seem to be an essential part of the story whenever this happens.

The crash in which Senator Bronson Cutting was killed cast some doubt on the magic of the so-called beam and of blind flying. The evidence in that case was more detailed because Senator Cutting was an important man, but it caused a dispute, and the customers of the air lines have no definite idea what the trouble was beyond the one plain fact that the ship, which contained all the gadgets known to man, was unable to find the landing field at Kansas City and was wrecked trying to reach another field where the weather was clear.

ALTHOUGH the layman is given to understand that altitude is the flyer's best friend, it is not uncommon to see transport ships flying close to the treetops in bad weather, as though the pilots were looking for landmarks. It would be interesting to be told in some of the literature released by the publicity bureaus of the passenger lines why this need occur if the beam is like a trolley wire. Are the pilots looking for landmarks and thus unable to follow the beam, or is it possible that certain types of ships use more fuel to climb high and are held down for reasons of frugality?

Ernest R. Basham, a transport pilot, wrecked a Condor last year putting it down on Staten Island when he was unable to find the field at Newark in a fog. He saved his 15 passengers but received no gratitude for that. Long afterward Basham explained that he was sent out with a warning to hurry to Newark, as there was a possibility of fog there. But he was delayed by head winds, and his fuel was running low when he passed over Newark in a fog at 600 feet and was unable to see the field. He claimed he was given incorrect weather reports which put the ceiling at 800 feet, and added that he had not been given the necessary reserve fuel supply, lack of which prevented him from reaching an emergency field.

There have been other wrecks in which ships came down far off their courses—all tending to impair the fabulous reputation of the beam.

• • • •

PRESS and public both are inclined to give aviation liberal breaks and not ask too searching question about failures. Aviation is looked to as an important arm of the national defense, and the arm cannot develop unless passengers provide pay loads. Moreover, many people don't much mind dying.

But railroad wrecks were always subject to great publicity back in the bloody, slam-bang days of the wooden cars, and the publicity served to key up the railroad men to their work. The aviation lines get by too much on glamour, tasty interior decoration, mystery, personal charm and indulgence.

Fallacy in Pessimism

By

William Lyon Phelps

AMONG other fallacies, like hating life and yet lamenting its brevity, is there not also this fallacy in the pessimistic attitude? A true pessimist should never be disappointed. He should expect little or nothing; he should be temporarily pleased at anything agreeable, and should never be rudely shaken by its opposite.

• • • •

Above all, the true pessimist should never hope. Yet the majority of pessimists seem to live in continually frustrated hopes. No one who knows me would call me a pessimist; yet I believe that human instincts are fundamentally selfish, that the weather is seldom perfect, that the majority of books, dramas, motion pictures, radio entertainments are rubbish, that a human mob is less intelligent, more stupid, and more cruel than any herd of animals, that the average boy or girl is not hungering and thirsting for knowledge and mental improvement, or is eager to make sacrifices to attain them; hence any enthusiastic delight at the spectacle of a noble character, of a beautiful day, of a magnificent book, play, picture, or radio talk, of an exhibition of enlightened public sentiment, of finding a youth full of ambition for the best things.

My expectations are apparently not so high as those of the pessimist; I am not so easily disappointed. On the other hand, I am delighted with everything beautiful or admirable, and I can not help greeting every sign of promise with wonder.

Russian Propaganda

A Japanese Correspondent Points Out That When Britain Broke Relations With The Soviet Specific Instances of Moscow's Intrigue Were Cited.

By K. K. Kawakami.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE American protest lodged with the Soviet government against Communist activities in this country calls to mind a similar British protest made in 1927. In tone one is as vigorous as the other. In both instances the charges preferred against Moscow are of the same nature.

A comparison, however, shows that the British protest was couched in much more specific terms than the American. Downing street, indeed, gave chapter and verse in support of its complaint, while Washington dealt with generalities. The British note cited, not merely what had transpired at the "Comintern" Congress, but the vitriolic anti-British utterances of high Soviet officials. Nor did it confine itself to Red activities in British Isles themselves. It pointed out intrigues against the world-wide British Empire and its far-flung interests.

Quite possibly the American Government is keeping its best cards for use at the proper future moment, for it has been freely intimated that the authorities concerned are in possession of much incriminating evidence. Between the British government's protest and its severence of diplomatic relations with Russia, almost three months intervened. It is still possible that Washington may follow the course pursued by London, for Mr. Hull's recent statement ends with this warning: "Whether such (friendly and official) relations between these two great countries thus unfortunately are to be impaired will depend upon the attitude and action of the Soviet government."

• • • •

THE British action was as spectacular as it was drastic. On February 23, 1927, Sir Austen Chamberlain addressed to the Soviet government a note of protest which ended with these words:

"His Majesty's government consider it necessary to warn the Union of Soviet Republics in the gravest terms that there are limits beyond which it is dangerous to drive public opinion in this country, and that a continuance of such acts as are here complained of must sooner or later render inevitable the abrogation of the trade agreement, the stipulations of which have been so flagrantly violated, and even the severance of ordinary diplomatic relations."

The note quoted Tchitcherin, commissar of foreign affairs, Voroshilov and Unschlicht, commissar and vice commissar of war, Bukharin, leading member of the Politbureau, Kameneff and Karahan, high-ranking Soviet diplomats, all of whom indulged in utterances contrary to the Soviet government's professed desire for British friendship. Bukharin, for instance, was shown to have urged the executive committee of the Comintern to help the Canton army to drive out British interests in China. He further declared that "the Chinese nationalist revolution and the English miners' strike are the chief spots upon which the Communist parties must concentrate their efforts."

Only five weeks after the British protest was made Scotland Yard intercepted an official code message dispatched by the Soviet Embassy to the Moscow government. The message said that British labor had been misled by "colored" information about China emanating from British sources, and recommended that an arrangement be made for dissemination of "accurate" knowledge in England to rouse labor's opposition against British "outrages" in China.

THIS and other similar revelations finally constrained the British government to resort to a most drastic action. On May 12, 1927, more than a hundred police swooped down upon Soviet House, which housed Arcos, Ltd., and the Soviet trade delegation, in London's financial district. The move was so sudden and swift that the Soviet agents were caught napping.

Soviet House was a five-story building in which more than 1,000 Soviet officials and employes were quartered. For two days and nights the police searched the Soviet offices. When the Russians on duty refused to surrender the keys to the two safes, pneumatic drills were used to break the doors open. The safes were really large rooms built of steel and concrete and guarded by huge thick steel doors.

Against this high-handed measure the Soviet protests were loud and violent. Premier Baldwin, however, justified the coup as an act of self-defense against a foreign military espionage. Speaking before the House of Commons he said:

"For many months the police, in collaboration with the military authorities, have been investigating the activities of a group of secret agents engaged in endeavoring to obtain highly confidential documents relating to the armed forces of Britain.

"From the information received and the evidence obtained in the course of these investigations, it became increasingly difficult to resist the conclusion that these agents were working in behalf of the Soviet government and obtained instructions from members of the Russian trade delegation, working in Soviet House, who arranged for the conveyance to Moscow of photographs or copies of the documents obtained.

"These suspicions were confirmed when, early this year, a British subject employed by the air force was convicted of stealing two such documents. The documents were recovered and the individual is now undergoing imprisonment. A further document of an official and highly confidential character, and so marked, recently was found to be missing, and from information secured and supported by documentary evidence it became clear that this document had been conveyed to Soviet House and there reproduced by means of a photostat apparatus."

• • • •

THE raid clearly established the fact that the offices of the Soviet trade delegation were habitually used for subversive correspondence. Among the documents seized was a letter addressed to Dzerzhinsky, head of the Cheka, the famous Soviet secret political police, the predecessor of the OGPU, written by one of its agents in London, recommending the use of Arcos trade ships for training Communist agitators. The letter said, in part:

"These ships of ours should be made a base for training politically conscious seamen, who after preliminary training can be sent to British ships. The choice of the men should be carefully made, preference being given to Negroes, Hindus and other oppressed nationals."

In 1925-27 the armies of China, under the guidance of a notorious Soviet agent named Borodin, conducted a violent campaign against British interests in the vast Yangtse Valley. Following the old strategy of "divide and rule," Borodin's plan was to destroy British influence in China and then attack the Japanese.

When Sir Robert Hodgson, the British Charge d'Affaires at Moscow, made inquiries of Maxim Litvinoff, the acting commissar of foreign affairs, as to the status of Borodin, Litvinoff blandly told Sir Robert that he did not know much about Borodin and that Borodin was a private citizen with no connection with the Soviet government. Yet, only a few months before the inquiries were made, M. Litvinoff's office sent a dispatch to the Soviet Embassy at Peking which said:

"Until a Soviet representative is appointed in Peking, Comrade Borodin is to take his orders direct from Moscow."

• • • •

ANOTHER significant dispatch, sent from the Soviet Embassy at London to the Soviet government under date of April 1, 1927, was disclosed by the British government. Its object was to advise the Soviet foreign office about the dissemination of "correct" information regarding the nationalist movement in China. It read in part:

"Copy to Berlin for Tomsky. One of the principal obstacles for conducting a campaign of protest against British violence in China is the appalling supply of information and the way in which wide labor circles are misled. It is necessary to send by tlegraph the official reports of the Nationalist government on the events at Nanking, in particular, facts which deny the information about Nanking given by Chamberlain in Parliament on March 30. Copies to be sent to the Independent Labor Party and the Daily Herald."

It was in such circumstances that Britain on May 26, 1927, severed diplomatic relations with Russia and also abrogated the Trade Agreement of 1921. In his note handed to M. Rosengolz, the Soviet Charge d'Affaires, Sir Austen Chamberlain said:

"His Majesty's government cannot suffer the existence here of a privileged organization which, under the guise of peaceful trading, carries on espionage and intrigue against the country in which it is established."

When the matter was debated in the House of Commons, J. R. Clynes, speaking for the labor opposition, said that a break with Russia would mean a loss of trade calculated to employ 5,600 men for a year in the most depressed British industries. In reply Sir Austen Chamberlain declared that the Soviet representatives in England had constantly dangled before the British public the prospect of important orders as an instrument of policy, but that when British recognition was given the Soviet regime the much advertised prospective orders proved but a mirage.

$40,000 Works in Peril By City-Club Dispute

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 6.—The Martinsburg City Council and the Berkeley Aviation Club remained in a deadlock over the transfer of the title of the Shepherd Flying Field after an expected agreement between the two bodies failed to materialize. Failure to come to an agreement within the next few days whereby the city will obtain title to the field may mean the loss of approximately $40,000 in WPA appropriations.

The deadlock is over governing the field, once it is taken over by the city. The aviation club wants it to be run by a board of governors composed of members of the club, while the city council contends that if such a governing body for the field is set up, the airport will not be eligible for the WPA funds.

Capital Stage

By

Ralph E. Renaud.

New York, Sept. 6.

RUMBLINGS of the coming theatrical season are already heard from behind clouds of Broadway rumor from which occasionally dart a flash of three-sheet lightning. One of the biggest repercussions, however, will be in Washington, rather than New York, for the most talked about of the new productions is "First Lady." The title is self-explanatory—even in a coal mine.

This George Kaufman-Katherine Dayton satire is referred to as an "expose of Dupont Circle," but it will no doubt extend to points farther South and will presumably include a northern exposure on Lafayette Square. Possibly that will be known as squaring the circle. When its companion piece, "Of Thee I Sing," made the political welkin ring its bosterous humor was its own passport and there was no difficulty in squaring the White House. The caliber of most of our statesmen was indicated in their general attitude of "Tranks for the buggy ride."

Ruth Chatterton is being brought from Hollywood by Sam Harris to play the leading role. She hasn't been seen on Broadway, except in shadowed simulation, since ten years ago when she did "The Man With a Load of Mischief." Anybody who remembers that has a good, strong recollection. But she is an actress of beauty and parts and, having been trained by the late Henry Miller, has a deft way with comedy. The present plan is to try "First Lady" out in Philadelphia, which is regarded as neutral and more or less placid territory, and then, early in October, to shoot the works in a Times Square show shop. A review of it should make interesting reading on Pennsylvania avenue and vicinity.

• • • •

WITH a couple of exceptions, the shows now adorning Broadway are all tried and true veterans. "Anything Goes" continues to go, "Personal Appearance," "The Children's Hour," "The Great Waltz," "The Old Maid" and "Three Men on a Horse" still offer an opportunity to anyone who overlooksd his theater shopping last Christmas. "Tobacco Road," which seems destined to get into the class of "Lightnin'" and "Abie's Irish Rose," is well along the highway of its second year. Then, of course, there is the Gilbert and Sullivan cycle and Earle Carroll's "Sketch Book," which contains some audacious poses, but is air-cooled.

But the theater this season, according to all the profits, will not be so exclusively the affair of New York as it has been for the last decade. Now that small change is getting a little looser there seems to be a demand for real plays throughout the provinces, a demand which the movies no doubt have slowly stimulated during the vacant years of the depression. We live in a mechanical age, but nothing has yet been developed to take the place of human being, even in the theater, where all is supposed to be illusion.

Katherine Cornell was the pioneer and trail blazer of the resurrected road. In "The Barrets of Wimpole Street" she toured 74 cities between December, 1933, and the following June. Her success brought tears to the eyes of many an old showman who had regarded the good old days as gone forever. Last season there were four outstanding road shows which cleaned up smartly. Those venturesome attractions were George M. Cohan in Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness," Helen Hayes in "Mary of Scotland," "As Thousands Cheer" and "The Green Pastures." The Marc Connally classic did the best business, with 93 stops, but the others found the going worth while, too.

• • • •

NOBODY knows what effect the newly created National Theater and Academy is going to have on the road. Perhaps it will be a dominating wind sweeping everything before it. Perhaps it will just be a superior sort of sigh. But the commercial theater isn't bothering its head about the National Theater and is rapidly getting ready for travel on its own account.

New York will have seen the last of the Pulitzer Prize play, "The Old Maid," by September 30. After that it is booked in 81 cities between the Canadian border and the Gulf and the Atlantic and Pacific. That business is actually better is indicated by some of the items on "The Old Maid's" itinery. She will hesitate for the evening in Bryan, Tex.; Hattiesburg, Miss., and Rock Hills, S. C.

Other out-of-town sojourners will be "Dodsworth," "The Great Waltz," "Life Begins at 8:40," "Three Men On a Horse," which may be playing simultaneously with three companies; "Thumbs Up," Katherine Cornell in her revival of "Romeo and Juliet," Ethel Barrymore in repertoire, and those old but never forgotten favorites, "Blossom Time" and "The Student Prince." In good time, too, "Personal Appearance," "The Children's Hour" and "Anything Goes" are expected to take to the road.

So it looks, with all these strange things going on in Washington, as though theate rtickets might become ou rnational currency.

Jack and Jill
Were hungry 'til
They saw the bill of fare;
Their appetite
Was made quite light
By prices listed there.

• • • •

If I had as much money as I could spend
My hunger on dining cars I would end;
I'd even smile and never get sore
At coffee marked 35 cents or more.

• • • •

Mary thought she'd like some lamb
With mint sauce on the side;
The thought came to her on a train
While going for a ride.

She got it in the dining car,
Then saw her check and said,
"I do not mind your charge for lamb,
But, boy, that charge for bread!"

• • • •

Jack Sprat could eat no fat,
His wife could eat no lean,
And so they ordered succotash
At thirty cents a bean.

• • • •

Seesaw, Margery Daw,
What'll you have 'em serve?
No soup, my dear,
Because I fear
We're going 'round a curve.

• • • •

As I was riding on a train
I met a maiden sweet,
I took her to the dining car
To get a bit to eat.

That maiden ordered a la carte
With unrestrain and ease . . .
I'm very quick at figures so
I had some bread and cheese.

Auto Fatality Inquest Set for September 16

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 6.—An inquest into the death of Thornton Palmer, 19, who succumbed to injuries received in an automobile accident August 19, was set yesterday for September 16, by Police Magistrate Joseph M. Armstrong, acting coroner.

The youth died of a fractured skull. Palmer's family said the youth had suffered 200 fractures during his life, because of soft bones. Frederick L. Goddard, of Eastport, drove the machine in which Palmer was fatally hurt after a collison with a machine driven by R. M. Fickin, of Washington.

Waynesboro Lions Told Of School Congestion

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 6.—Inadequate facilities and crowded conditions existing in the Waynesboro High School were outlined by Superintendent D. J. Keener, to members of the Lions Club at a meeting Wednesday. Need of more modern facilities, including a library and home economics department, were stressed. Keener reported there are over 700 students in the high school building, which has a normal capacity for 300.

In connection with the school situation, action was taken last week by the board of education to apply for $300,000 Federal funds for a new high school. According to K. G. Potter, president of the board, the application was filed for the proposed new structure.

Lutheran Parley Will Debate Stand of Church on Divorce

The question of marriage and divorce, with reference to the position that the Lutheran Church will take toward the remarriage of divorced persons, will be reviewed at a meeting of a large branch of that denomination next week in Youngstown, Ohio.

Several Washington pastors, who belong to the Eastern District of the branch, the American Lutheran Church, plan to attend the meetings.

The subject will be presented by Dr. W. E. Schramm, author and editor of Butler, Pa. The question, when debated on the floor of the convention, will assist the Lutheran body in formulating a definite and consistent policy for future situations.

Other questions to be taken up are "Spirituality, the Need of the Hour," to be discused by the Rev. Albert Horn, of Hubbard, Ohio, and "How Jesus Taught," by the Rev. P. J. Mackensen, of Baltimore.

Dr. Walter E. Schuette, Sewickley, Pa., is president of the Eastern body which serves 200 congregations and 60,000 communicants in most of the States along the Eastern seaboard and in two provinces of Canada.

The pastors of the Washington area who will attend the Youngstown convention are the Rev. E. Meuser, St. Matthew's Lutheran Church; the Rev. Gerhard Lenski, Grace Lutheran Church; the Rev. George Grewenow, Faith Lutheran Church, Clarendon; the Rev. Henry Whiting, Christ Lutheran Church, Bethesda, and the Rev. J. A. Pfeiffer, Takoma Lutheran Church.

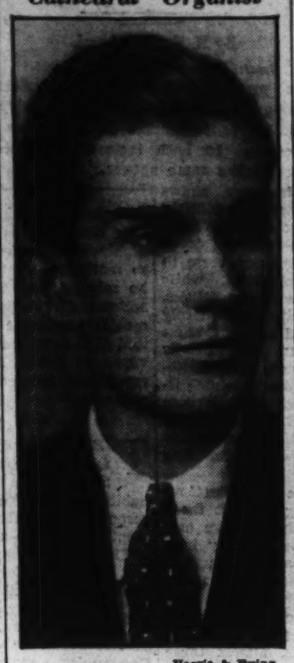
Cathedral Organist



Harris & Ewing.

ROBERT G. BARROW, new organist and choirmaster at Washington Cathedral, assumes his duties at services tomorrow morning.

R. G. Barrow, New Organist, To Play Service

To Perform at Washington Cathedral Choir Tomorrow.

Robert G. Barrow, Washington Cathedral's new organist and choir director, will play his first service at the celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 a. m. in Bethlehem Chapel.

A native of Washington and a graduate with honors of St. Alban's, the National Cathedral School for Boys, Mr. Barrow succeeds the late Edgar Priest, under whom he studied voice and organ.

While serving as crucifer in the Cathedral choir, the young musician was appointed organist at St. Agnes' Church in Washington. Later he became organist and choirmaster in the First Baptist Church in West Haven, Conn. Later while serving as organist of the Yale Divinity School, he won special honors in the Yale Music School. Training there led to his winning the Ditson Fellowship for Foreign Study for the year 1934 and 1935.

While in England Mr. Barrow studied under Dr. Vaughan Williams and Dr. Earnest Bullock at Westminster Abbey and had opportunity to become familiar with music standards in the English and French cathedrals. He holds the degrees of bachelor of arts and master of music.

While in New England Mr. Barrow gave several recitals in Woolsey Hall at Yale, and parts of his first symphony were played by the New Haven Symphony Orchestra.

Since the late Mr. Priest's death last spring, the Cathedral music has been under the direction of Miss Jean Phillips, one of Mr. Priest's pupils.

The Man of Wisdom

Jan Kiepura's Tenor Is Challenge to Movie Goers Who Want Quality Singing

Warner Shifts Are Announced By J. J. Payette

Jimmy Lake Not Perturbed by Burlesque Dancers' Strike.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

Musical pictures, reborn several months ago after a long nap, are making an interesting comeback. Grace Moore's starring vehicles, "One Night of Love" and, to a lesser degree, "Love Me Forever," not only wrote cinema history but sent Gladys Swarthout, Lily Pons and how many more prima donnas scurrying westward to begin film debuts.

The recurrence of the cycle has been ridden to more cash and more glory by Bing Crosby, Joe Penner, Nelson Eddy, Rudy Vallee, Lanny Ross and Dick Powell, to name only a few who come to mind. So it becomes rather diverting, at least to us, to conjecture how Jan Kiepura will fit into this harmonious pattern.

The question came in yesterday at a preview of "My Heart Is Calling," the English picture, which is scheduled to be shown at the Belasco for a week beginning tomorrow.

"My Heart Is Calling."

In Kiepura the movies have a young man possessing a tenor voice of such quality that only a few measures of it are sufficient to bring out the stark realization that the Powells and the Crosbys are, indeed, crooners and not singers. His ebullient sponsors call him "the Polish Caruso" and we were forced to admit such an extravagant claim has some basis as we listened to the fellow's upper register yesterday in a little projection room.

The public will support singing, as well as crooning, on the screen, but whether, in this instance, Kiepura can overcome such serious handicaps as accent, an economical advance campaign, skepticism of foreign pictures and such deficiencies as crop out in "My Heart Is Calling" remains to be seen.

Sonnie Hale's brand of humor is, to this reporter, the most outstanding deficiency in the second attraction of the Belasco's new season but we hasten to explain this is purely a matter of taste.

Not since he came to the Rialto last year in "Be Mine Tonight," a musical which had the misfortune to be released when musicals were unfashionable, has Kiepura's voice been heard here. Now that it is no longer considered a productional error to unloose a picture which relies on song, either light or heavy, for its strength, we wonder what will be the box-office reaction to a truly fine operatic tenor.

Coming events cast their shadows before, sometimes in the form of invitations. From Carter Barron: "When Friday's chronometer strikes four won't you saunter up to the Willard Hotel quarters of the Variety Club and join with invited members of the press in placating a parched throat and splitting an infinitive or two or a refreshing smile with Eleanor Holm and Art Jarrett? Remember that one gay Friday afternoon is worth a bushel of wish-I-could-have-been-there." From another of Washington's well-known showmen: "Tom Moore and associates request the honor of your presence at a private preview, a world premiere, of the Motion-Picture Production "Harmony Lane," based on the life and music of Stephen Colline Foster, Saturday evening, September 7, 1935, at 8:30, Rialto Theater, upper Ninth street above G."

Warner Brothers Changes.

Shifts affecting Harry E. Lohmeyer, Nat Glasser, Guy Wonders and other local and sectional Warner officials were announced yesterday by John J. Payette, general zone manager.

Guy Wonders, production manager for the Earle, has been made district manager of theaters in Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, including houses in Baltimore, Hagerstown, Frederick, Martinsburg and Waynesboro. The resignation of John E. Firnkoess, Wonders' predecessor, brought about the wholesale shifts. He has returned to the New York office to await his next assignment.

Nat Glasser, formerly Washington district manager, will supervise the theaters in Virginia, including such cities as Lynchburg, Staunton, Harrisonburg, Lexington, Clifton Forge and Winchester.

Harry E. Lohmeyer, Earle manager, who has been with Warner Bros. since 1917, becomes district manager of theaters in Washington. His former post will be taken by Charles R. Grimes, promoted from the managership of the Colony.

The Colony will come under the charge of Fred J. Thomas, now at the York, and Arthur Kilburg leaves the Home to take his place. Claude Land, recently named assistant manager of the Central, will become manager of the Home.

The new appointments will become effective Sunday.

Payette also announced that the Uptown and the Penn, new theaters under construction, will be managed by Walter E. Cersley and Daniel A. Reynolds, respectively. At present Cersley is head of the Avalon and Reynolds manages the Avenue Grand.

Strike of the Strippers.

A strike of burlesque dancers and chorus girls was called yesterday in New York and several other Eastern cities, but Jimmy Lake, boss of Washington's outlet for wiggle entertainment, the Gayety, is not worried.

Thomas J. Phillips, president of the Burlesque Artists Association, ordered the walkout in protest against what he terms "coolie labor"—long hours and low salaries. As a result New York's Minskyville was dark last night, with eight houses closed and the strike reported to be spreading to Philadelphia, Atlantic City and Washington.

But Jimmy Lake, who plans to reopen his Gayety on September 15, expressed only mild concern when telephoned for an opinion.

"Sure, we'll open on the 15th," he said. "All we want from them (the B. A. A.) is the right to arbitrate and the right to put new faces in our shows. They even gave me trouble last season when I billed Hinda Wassau, arguing that she came from a night club engagement and wasn't a regular burlesque artist. Why, on account of their rules I can't get Sally Rand or Joe Louis. Sure we'll open on the 15th."

Around the Corner.

Director Wesley Ruggles apparently prefers brunettes . . . none of the female leads he chose for "Accent on Youth" is a blonde . . . that goes for Sylvia Sidney, Catherine Douce and Astrid Allwyn . . . except that the latter is a blonde . . . only she changed to chestnut at Ruggles' command . . . it's a prejudice that begins at home . . . Mrs. Ruggles (Arline Judge) is a brunette . . . "Ten million sinners writhing in eternal torment, labyrinthian torture chambers, lakes of flame and craters of doom make this production an unforgettable one" . . . says Loew's Fox . . . Ted Weems has been associated with dance music and orchestras since 1923 . . . Col. (Kentucky) Angie Ratto, of the Palace, says each audience applauds the trailer showing flashes of Will Rogers in "Steamboat 'Round the Bend" . . . Bert Granoff will sing "Indian Love Call" and "Auf Wiedersehn" from the orchestra pit on the Earle's new bill which opens today . . . it will be their first stage appearance outside of Chicago in two years when Bliss, Lewis and Ash (Sophisticates of Rhythm) get on the Fox boards today.

Via Associated Press.

Peggy Montgomery, 18, thinks Jane Wither's (Ginger) popularity will last longer than Shirley Temple's. Her prediction has a peculiar significance for Peggy Montgomery is none other than the Baby Peggy who was earning as much as $2,500 a week as a child actress in pictures a decade ago. (How time flies!)

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer yesterday announced it has closed a three-year contract with Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink under which she will be starred in several films.

Mexican film producers plan to increase average expenditures to 100,000 pesos. Hitherto feature pictures have averaged 60,000 pesos.

"Trilby" Coming Back.

"To Die at Dawn" will not be the Roadside Players' final production of the summer season, according to an announcement that reached this desk last night. That honor has been reserved for "Trilby," which the barn theater gave as its fourth offering of the 1935 schedule.

Next will be devoted to "To Die at Dawn," as previously planned, and "Trilby" will be presented the following week to conclude the Roadsiders' 14-week season. Denis Connell and Carey Lucas will return in their respective roles of Svengali and Trilby. Each production will be staged six nights a week, as usual.

Simultaneously word came out that Walter Pick has been awarded a two-year scholarship to the New York School of the Theater. Pick, whose idea for summer barn theater for Washington led to founding of the Roadsiders, had major roles in three of the group's productions last season, its first. This year he has served as house manager.

Toilet Article Sale Presents Rare Bargains

Mirror Trays, Rubber Bath Sprays, Guest Puffs Among Values.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

HERALDING the fall is the September sale going full strong in the toiletries section of a local store. The counters are laden with bargains in a hundred different guises. There are odd little items for your boudoir and bath, and gobs of especially priced beautifiers. Here's a bet you can't go down one aisle without seeing at least one thing you need and want.

Among the heterogeneous collection of sales items here are a few that might interest you particularly: Oval shaped mirror trays with novelty handles and felt backs, 78 cents. (Just perfect for adding the dressy touch to your toilet table.) Cellophane packages containing ten 3-inch powder puffs, 38 cents. (A thoughtful gesture in the guest room.) Pastel handle tooth brushes in three styles, 18 cents apiece. (A bit of useful color in the bathroom.) Rubber bath sprays complete with rubber hose in green, blue and red, 58 cents. (Grand substitutes for showers.)

These few things, listed at random, should give you a pretty good idea of the innumerable values, yours for the buying, to be found at this September selling.

Tailored Pajamas for School.

LOOKING for a school girl's wardrobe in which to make themselves at home are the two-piece tailored pajamas in the lingerie department of a downtown store. You ought to see them. Button down the front styles, with short sleeves and a small rolled collar. Lots of colors to choose from. And very modest prices.

Oil Silk Shower Curtains.

SCRUPULOUS housewives who find the usual run of shower curtains damp and dripping nuisances will be delighted with some new ones made of oil silk. These have two advantages. They have more sheen and are prettier—and they're more practical. They dry almost immediately, and last forever. The price? Just $1.99. You'll find them in the housefurnishing department of an F street store.

Time to Clean Upholstery.

When a loathsome task is to be done, there's no need putting it off. Better pitch in now, and have it over with. So what about that autumn duty of cleaning the upholstery? If you use a certain old English cleanser you'll find the upholstery gives way to soil in the bat of an eye. And you'll find that the effort required isn't half as much as you thought!

You may buy this cleanser in half-gallon quantities for only 94 cents. One pint will cost you 40 cents. Besides upholstery, it will clean drapes, tapestries, velour, woolen robes and auto seat coverings.

It's safe to have around, too, as it is not inflammable.

Big Season for Pearls.

THERE'S a big future for pearls this season, say the jewelry stylists. Pearl earrings to hang from shell pink ears; pearl clips to garnish low-cut necklines; ropes of pearls to fit in with the Renaissance scheme of things; pearl chokers to flatter snow-white necks; pearl bracelets to bring out the beauty of wrists and arms; pearl brooches to glow on velvet gowns. Pearls, and more pearls.

One downtown store has an unusually large and well-chosen selection of pearl jewelry. You'll find individual pieces, sets and novelty clips that will you'll not want to resist.

Choose Hats to Suit Mood, Madame Nicole Advises

A change in hats is the best way of achieving a new personality and adding variety to life, believes Mme. Nicole, French-American millinery designer.

Headwear Changes Your Aspect Even More Than Dresses, Noted Milliner Asserts; Variation Held Attractive; Objects to Off-Face Model.

Should you choose your hats to suit your type, or should you change your type by means of your hat? This is one of the many hat questions discussed by Mme. Juliette Nicole, outstanding French-American milliner, in the following article, ninth in a series of interviews with famous designers.

By Frances Mangum.

HATS SHOULD be suited to your temperament. That is the dictum of Mme. Juliette Nicole.

This vivacious young Frenchwoman firmly believes that hats have more uses than meet the casual eye.

"They must be suited to you!" she said. "Just like music. There are times when you want to hear a Wagnerian symphony; other times a Strauss waltz. So with hats. Sometimes you want a wide-brimmed hat with flowers and ribbons, because you feel that way. That hat suits your mood. Another time you want a soft little felt. Another time, a sophisticated toque. Ah, there is so much to making hats—and wearing them," she laughed.

Mme. Nicole, who is Niki to friends, has found that hats even more than dresses help one to change type.

Wise to Change, She Says.

"And it is good, so good, for a woman to change. It is refreshing. It makes her more attractive. No man wants a woman to be the same all the time. A hundred times no!" she exclaimed.

It is Mme. Nicole's theory that the smart women will include in her wardrobe a sophisticated hat, a girlish hat, a sports hat and a naive hat. While all these hats must be suited to her, they each one bring out different and equally charming points in her personality.

"And hats should be so carefully chosen," she said. "Before I design a hat for a client, I study her type. I must make a hat that is for her alone. That would not do for anyone else. I think over my client, and then I make her hat. It takes time because I do not, what you say, dish out hats, oui?"

She Likes All Types of Hats.

Mme. Nicole likes making all types of hats.

"Each one is interesting, but I am especially devoted to small hats. Those people who say men like big-brimmed hats are not right," she declared. "Men like a woman in a small hat. It is provocative. They may like to look at some other woman with the large hat; but the one they are with, they like best to see her face. And besides," she added, "a woman has such an advantage with a small hat. She can use her eyes so well. And express herself better when she smiles, or laughs, or frowns, or pouts!"

Mme. Nicole is what she termed "very much off" the off-the-face hat.

"It is too hard to wear, she declared. "To wear it well one must have a very precise hairdress and the make-up must be perfect. It is too all-revealing. Of course," she said, "when it is worn well, it is fine, but, ah me, so seldom is it worn well!"

Nervous Breakdown Is Almost Unknown To Chinese Women

The nervous breakdown, pet affliction of the American woman, is unknown to women of China. However, Chinese women suffer a heavier toll of other diseases as a result of their ignorance of hygiene and sanitation, the Associated Press reports.

Because the Chinese woman lives a routine life centering about her family activities she does not face the high pressure struggle that American women do. Dress styles in China change scarcely at all from year to year and there is no strain of keeping up with the world as in America. Having never heard of germs the Chinese woman does not worry about disease.

American household conveniences such as washing machines, vacuum cleaners and running water are unheard of throughout China except in a few wealthy homes of the coast cities. Besides cooking for her family the Chinese woman makes all the clothes used, plucking the cotton in the field, spinning it, weaving it into cloth and fashioning the cloth into garments.

In spite of the fact that the Chinese home usually is the center of several generations and their families, nervous disorders and insanity are almost unknown among Chinese women.

Mother of 15-Year-Old High School Boy Comes Into Mental Conflict With Educators Concerning Son's Ability to Handle Studies; Asks for Comment.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: May I please have the following problem commented on in your column? I feel sure many mothers are having the same trouble with their adolescent sons. My son was 15 years of age in August. He enters his sophomore year in high school this month. He is taking the academic course, as I have always wanted him to have the advantage of a college education.

His teachers seem divided in opinion as to whether he can carry this course. The past year was his first in this particular school, which in my opinion seems lacking in comparison to the school he formerly attended. I should like to be very sure that he is being rightly advised before any changes are made in his studies. If you can tell me of an educator who can help me, I shall be most grateful.

I have talked to the principal of the school in question, but am dissatisfied with the results of that interview. Sincerely,

WORRIED MOTHER.

Advice to a Mother.

DEAR WORRIED MOTHER: The recommended procedure in cases of this kind is, first, to talk with the principal, as you have done. If this fails to result in a meeting of minds, the next step is to take the problem to the assistant superintendent of junior high schools, or the assistant superintendent of senior high schools, depending upon which division has the student enrolled. In your son's case, it would be the assistant superintendent of senior high schools. These officials have their offices in the Franklin School, Thirteenth and K streets northwest.

• • • •

The only comment I have to offer is this: Don't make the mistake of trying to use your son as the medium through which you hope to satisfy certain driving ambitions of your own. A college education will do him little good if he is helplessly propelled through the experience by an iron-willed mother's grim determination to give him certain advantages she had made up her mind he needs. And it may do him more harm than good if he is forced now, at this critical period in his nervous and physical growth, into studies beyond his intellectual reach. Nervous and even mental breakdowns sometimes result from just such relentless parental prodding.

• • • •

In your place I would permit my son to be guided by his own preferences and capabilities, supplemented by the counsel of his teachers, principal and superintendent. I would teach him respect for their opinions. They have made it their life work to understand student minds, student capabilities and student problems, and are qualified to look at your son's problem objectively and deal with it sanely. All too often parents are not so qualified. Too often they regard their children as sort of postscript opportunities for reliving their own lives.

• • • •

Closing their eyes to the fact that their children's desires and abilities may be entirely different from their own, such parents attempt to cast their hapless offspring in the mold of their own ambitions, often invading the school room in a ruthless effort to attain this end. If you value your son's mental and physical health, his happiness and his chances of future success, guard against being such a parent.

M. H.

Women Score As 'Architects' Of Old Homes

Take 3 of 4 First Prizes in Renovation Contest at Kansas City.

THE ability of women to do a better job than men in rejuvenating the house was demonstrated in the outcome of an unusual contest conducted by Kansas City's prosperity improvement program. Women walked off with three of the four first prizes.

To stimulate interest in home repair and modernization, the prosperity improvement program selected four old houses in different parts of the city and offered prizes for the best suggestion for bringing them up-to-date. A limit of cost of $1,250 was set in each instance and the awards were to go to persons who suggested work that was considered the most necessary and practical.

The winners received $500 worth of labor and material each for the improvement of their own homes

The women did not confine their modernization to what might have been expected of them, the beautification of rooms and the addition of facilities, such as in the kitchen and bath. They specified radical changes in the exteriors as well, converting the houses from drab, out-of-date affairs to dwellings attractive and new in design.

One house modernized had heavy, old-fashioned, overhanging eaves. These were cut off and the brown walnut paint was changed to white. That cost not quite half the appropriation. Inside improvements were almost equally drastic. Old mantels, plate rails and other features, such as beams, were removed, and all the rooms were decorated. The work that was done is believed to have doubled the value of the property.

One house modernized received a new roof and a new coat of paint; but for the most part interior changes were made. These included new wiring to permit the use of electric features. Improvements were made in virtually all the rooms. In dollars the results are considered worth far more than the outlay.

Bathing-Beauty Exhibitions Challenge Women of Future To Discard Their Old Ideals

By Malvina Lindsay.

THE BEST FIGHTERS, swimmers, golfers, horseshoe pitchers, etc., having been determined, the Nation now selects its champion beauty—Miss America of 1935. At Atlantic City 60 young women, supposedly the cream of America's current beauty crop, have been exhibiting to judges their bodily proportions, their grace and their girlie-girlie smiles.

• • • •

Th Atlantic City pageant, climax of the thousands of smaller beauty shows held this summer, is a significant feminine phenomenon. It represents a new attitude that has developed in America within the present century, even within the present generation, and one that must be reckoned with by women of the future.

• • • •

The idea that beauty unaware was the only true beauty has been perpetuated for centuries by poets, preachers and parents. For generations Wordsworth's Lucy, "the violet by the mossy stone," was held up as the ideal of feminine charm. Up to within recent years modesty was extolled as the chief virtue of womanhood and mothers zealously taught their daughters that "handsome is as handsome does." Even women who secretly believed themselves devastating pretended a vehement disbelief in their own charms.

CERTAINLY the woman of subtle tastes today still sees something crass in the bulkish and materialistic conception of feminine beauty as exemplified by the bathing beauty contest. She feels and feels rightly that the real flame of beauty is within, that beauty in its highest essence is like love, a growth, something to be worked for and struggled for.

• • • •

And yet the intellectual or so-called superior women has something to learn from the beauty contest, and that is to cultivate a little more confidence and faith in her own feminine powers. She is the victim of a Puritan hangover of physical self-doubting and self-torture that has been handed down through generations of feminine ancestors. Probably she could be more effective in the world and much happier if she cultivated more of the pagan attitude of the beauty contestant.

• • • •

John Cowper Powys in "The Art of Happiness" says: "A woman subtle in the art of happiness makes the utmost of all the 'narcissism,' all the self love she can possibly summon up. . . . What she must get into her head is—and let her pretend it if she doesn't believe it—that every woman in the world has something desirable about her. As a matter of fact there would be no 'pretense' about it if it were not for that self-lacerating demon in the heart of unhappy woman which refuses to leave her the least semblance of desirability."

THIS, OF COURSE, does not mean that women should surrender themselves wholly to the material pursuits of beauty. Powys, a past master in discovering the loveliness of intangibles, would be the last to advise such a course. But it does mean that a woman with beauty in her soul is more likely to radiate it if she is sustained by a greater faith in the beauty of her body.

• • • •

It is no use to sigh for the good old days of beauty unaware and feminine modesty, desirable though they may have been. A new feminine regime is here. Beauty has come out in the open. The prize beauty must be chosen at every high school or college the same as the prize scholar. The most perfect figure must be selected at every bathing beach. Mothers no longer can afford not to help their daughters to be beautiful in body as well as mind nor to be as beautiful as possible themselves.

• • • •

The modern intellectual woman must face the challenge of the bathing beauty. She cannot withdraw into any nunnery of the mind or spirit and leave the most tangible fruits of life to her less gifted rivals. Her weakness in the past has not been, as is popularly supposed, that she had too many brains and too little beauty, but rather that she had too much faith in the one and too little in the other. Without becoming a smirking, wiggling exhibitionist she can yet broaden her influence if she joyously and self-confidently uses not part but all of the talents she possesses.

Reformatory Girls Will Go to College When Terms End

Sherborn, Mass.—A former gangster girl and an ex-vagabond girl will enter college in the autumn when their terms at the Sherborn reformatory end.

They have been converted from underworld characters through the efforts of Dr. Miriam Van Waters, superintendent of the institution.

Scholarships established by the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs will enable them to enter college.

The first girl was one of three children sent to an orphanage when her mother died. After leaving the orphanage, she developed delinquent habits and finally, in 1932, was sent to Sherborn.

The other was a sickly child whose mother was in a hospital for mental diseases. The girl started hitch-hiking and entered upon a vagabond life. She had a long record in other States when she reached here.

There are 400 girls and women at Sherborn from 17 to 70 years of age and serving terms of from one year to life.

Child's Hobbies Prove Benefit In Adult Life

The following article is one of a series on home activities for children appearing Tuesdays and Saturdays on the woman's page. Mrs. Bartlett, the author, is active in progressive education circles.

By Lenore K. Bartlett.

CHILDHOOD INTEREST and hobbies are often carried over into adult life and therefore are important not only as a constructive use of leisure time in our early years, but may form also the basis for solving later problems.

MRS. BARTLETT.

This was brought home forcibly to me the other day during a call I made on an ill friend. She had been forced to stay in bed for six months and naturally time hung heavy on her hands. Reading didn't seem to be sufficiently distracting and her state of mind was anything but cheerful until one day she came across an old scrap book which she had started in junior high school.

At that time she had been interested in the different forms of government. She had gathered pictures of kings, queens, presidents and rulers of most of the countries of the world. She had written a short resume of each type of government and had clipped pertinent stories and articles which she pasted into a scrap book. Of course by now this was entirely out of date and she is busy again, clipping and pasting.

Materials Should Be Supplied.

It is a splendid thing for all of us to branch out of our own little world of people into a larger one for we soon find that our problems are general rather than individual. Relying for our happiness solely on people is a dangerous thing for they disappoint us many times. If we start our children out with the idea and example that things are more easily molded to our interests than people, we are helping them to lay a solid foundation.

I heard of a child who started a scrap book with a collection of dog pictures. He was five when he started and it still holds his interest at 12.

Another child has a famous picture scrapbook. She clips copies of famous pictures such as those of the old masters from magazines, colored post cards and newspapers. A company in New York produces excellent copies in series form at a reasonable price which make a splendid start for the collection and should arouse an interest which can be continued and expanded. The little girl I have in mind also seeks information as to the present location of the originals and a brief story of the artist concerning each of the prints she finds. Not long ago her parents took her abroad and the famous picture collection went along. In their travels the child insisted on seeing these originals wherever possible.

Pictures and articles about explorers, methods of transportation, Presidents of the United States and their wives, kings and queens, flags of different nations and any number of other subjects are admirably suited to such a hobby. They stimulate a growing interest; make a child more alert because he is continually on the lookout for material and often lead to permanent hobbies.

For help in providing your children a more interesting home life or meeting other of their problems, write Mrs. Bartlett, in care of The Post.

Exotic Hues Feature Dress Jewelry

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Costume jewelry for daytime is exotically colorful this fall. Going in for brilliantly massed color effects in settings just as brilliant. And adopting the glowing colors of Renaissance Italy—or going Hindu and subtle as Oriental incense.

Sketched above is a Renaissance-inspired group. Earrings and a bracelet that might have been worn by a Borgia . . . sparkling as the wit of Cellini. The stones are simulated emeralds or rubies or sapphires—amethyst or topaz set singly or, as sketched, in clusters. But there's always the effect of a mass of color which ties up with the richness of Renaissance costumes.

Fashion liked artificial flowers last spring and summer. This fall, she substitutes jeweled sprays that look like boutonnieres. Large sized, single set stones turn the trick, either monotone or multi-colored. They add more than a dash of Renaissance glitter to fall daytime costumes!

Hindu designs swing effectively into the costume jewelry picture, too—to tie up with Hindu-inspired costumes. Typical of these is the group sketched at the lower right of the illustration . . . with its asymmetrical centers of shining gold surrounded by brightly colored stones.

Smoky simulated cystal makes a subtle and effective background for Hindu jewelry. Which, incidentally, is usually large without being in the least barbaric. It's ordered and mannerly . . . fit for an Indian princess!

Much interest on what Fashion puts in her hair, these fall evenings . . . more than in many a long day.

Perhaps strands of pearls are twisted through shining tresses—or a pair of jeweled clips caught here and there. Typical of the new clips is the triangular one sketched. Made of sparkling stones set off with bits of crystal.

Rhinestones, too, are definitely on the up, as a result of all this Renaissance brilliance. (That's a rhinestone buckle sketched.) They combine with clusters of colored stones, or just glisten and twinkle away all by themselves.

South	West	North	East
1NT(1)	Pass	2NT(2)	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—South's hand is an ideal one no-trump bid containing 4½ honor-tricks and a 4-3-3-3 distribution.

2—Despite North's two Aces, the poverty of his distribution and the number of honors held prevents a raise to more than two notrump.

The Play.

West opened the fourth best diamond and declarer ducked the first two rounds of the suit, winning the third lead with the Ace and noting East's discard of a spade. A rapid count of tricks showed that the North-South hands would surely produce eight in top cards and a ninth was readily available in the club suit. In fact, a successful club finesse might produce a tenth. There was also a possibiltiy of setting up a fourth heart, but this appeared remote since West's six-card diamond suit made a heart break even more unlikely than the purely mathematical percentages would indicate. All of the Souths therefore attacked the club suit, but those who laid down the King and then went over to dummy and took the finesse were defeated when West won the Queen and ran his three good diamonds.

The wiser Souths, realizing that they needed three and not four tricks in clubs, pursued a safer course. If West held three to the Queen, it could not be captured. If East held the Queen, the loss of the trick which might have been won by finessing, would still leave declarer his nine tricks. Just in case West had the Queen doubleton, the play of the Ace and King would give the declarer an extra chance to insure the safety of his contract. When this play was made, however, the drop of the Queen actually produced the tenth trick which had led astray the players who took the finesse.

Fears on Swallowing Pins Are Allayed

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IN spite of all that we can do children and sometimes adults will swallow objects that cannot be digested. Needles, hairpins, straight pins, and safety pins give the most trouble, but fortunately the great majority will pass spontaneously through the outlet and move slowly along the intestinal tract.

Instruments have been devised which enable the physician to look directly into the esophagus, a bronchus, the stomach, the bladder, etc. Most of these are lighted, permitting a clear vision of the tissues examined. In this way much information has been gained relative to inflammation, tumor growths, and the presence of foreign bodies.

The mere fact that a child has swallowed some foreign substance does not create an emergency. During a ten year period in one of our large hospital centers 849 patients were admitted with hard or metallic objects in the stomach. In 818 the articles passed through the intestinal tract without difficulty. In only 12 cases was it necessary to open the abdomen surgically. The balance were removed from the stomach by means of the gastroscope, one of the instruments referred to.

The first qustion is, "will the substance pass through the outlet of the stomach, and can it travel the devious turns and twists of the intestinal tract?" If in the opinion of an experienced physician the article is too large or too long, mechanical removal should be undertaken.

Before the decision is made as to what to do careful X-ray studies should be made. The present-day development of the gastroscope has been of the greatest service in aiding the removal of those substances that cannot safely be left to nature. With the guidance of the X-ray the instrument can be passed into the stomach without the administration of a general anesthetic. The operation must be carried out under ideal conditions, as only an expert can operate the equipment effectively. Only one or two days in the hospital will be required.

Instruments Devised to Enable Physicians to Locate Them.

It was formerly thought that the feeding of large quantities of bulky food would envelop a tack or pin. There is so little danger that the object will penetrate the stomach or intestinal wall that this is not necessary. The child should be instructed to follow the usual routine diet in the usual amounts. Vigorous play, however, should not be indulged in. Neither should a laxative be given as some cases have been reported in which violent contractions of the intestine have been followed by perforation.

Now and then substances will remain in the intestinal tract for a long period of time, and Chevalier Jackson reported a case of a tooth paste tube cap that remained in the stomach of a child for two years. In this case it was shown that there was a contraction of the outlet of the stomach which prevented its passage.

Week-end Menu Problems of Housewives Are Solved by the New Saturday Food Page

Lamb Is Best Buy of Week; Pot Roast Also Economical

Leftover Pieces Can Be Used for Delicious Stew, Pie or Hash; Beef Should Be Seared to Preserve the Juices.

By Dorothea Duncan.

This week-end the wise housewife will pass by the untouchables—sirloin and rib roast of beef, pork, particularly the smoked varieties, and veal—and look to the less expensive meats with which to grace her Sunday dinner table. The price of the above mentioned meats is too high for any but the unlimited budget, but there are numerous other cuts that are comparatively inexpensive and especially well suited for the week-end menus.

Lamb is about the best buy of the week and you may take your choice of three types of roasts; a leg of lamb, the shoulder or the breast. The shoulder is more attractive if the excess fat and bone are removed and the meat rolled. Both the shoulder and the breast are suitable roasts for stuffing.

Some of the stores have been featuring a special price on sirloin and porterhouse steaks. There is just a possibility that this special may be held over for the week-end, although steaks are not as popular a Sunday dish as roasts. Otherwise both sirloin and porterhouse are in the very expensive class. Even top round, which is so popular when cut thick and simmered into a tender Swiss steak, is unusually high.

Pot Roasts Economical.

Some families can be satisfied with nothing short of a large roast of beef for Sunday dinner. There are several possibilities for you then in the various types of pot roasts. The pot roasts are always an economical buy because they are entirely boneless and cut to excellent advantage. Any leftover pieces will make the basis for a delicious stew, pot pie or hash. The woman who hates to heat up her kitchen by lighting the oven will appreciate the qualities of a pot roast. The pot roasts are compact and fairly regular as to shape, so they fit neatly into a heavy, round pan and can be cooked to perfection on top of the stove.

The rump roast, usually known as a bouillon roast in Washington, is cut from the side of the round. It is boneless and has an excellent flavor. The chuck roast is very inexpensive in comparison to other roasts and if boned also makes an excellent roast. A three-corner roast is particularly popular in this part of the country. It is cut from the side of the chuck after the rib has been removed and is also boneless.

A pot roast is not the most tender cut of meat, but if properly cooked may be made tender and has a delicious flavor. To tender the fibers the meat must be first seared to preserve the juices and then cooked slowly for a long period of time. This means that a perfectly cooked pot roast will have a delicious, thin, brown crust and will be evenly cooked throughout. Following is the favorite method of preparing a pot roast of rump, chuck or round:

Pot Roast.

3 to 4 pounds chuck, round or rump
Flour
3 tablespoons fat, preferably from salt pork
1 cup sliced carrots
1 cup sliced onions
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup sliced turnips.

If the meat is not in a solid piece have the butcher skewer or tie it into shape. Wipe it with a damp cloth and roll it in flour. Heat the fat in a frying pan. Put in the meat and brown on all sides. Transfer the meat after it is brown to a kettle deep enough to hold the beef and vegetables when the cover is on. Cover tightly and let simmer slowly for from four to five hours, turning twice. Add the vegetables at the end of four hour's cooking. After removing the meat and vegetables, thicken the gravy by adding one to two tablespoons of flour mixed with cold water for each cup of broth.

By making gravy from the broth you are able to retain any of the juice that the meat has lost during cooking. If gravy is not an approved dish at your table, save it to combine with the left-over beef in making a shepherd's pie.

Shepherds Pie.

Cover bottom of small greased baking dish with hot mashed potatoes; add a thick layer of roast beef, chopped or cut in small pieces, (seasoned with salt, pepper and a few drops of onion juice, and moistened with some of the gravy; cover with a thin layer of mashed potatoes, and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit) long enough to heat through.

Household Hints

Readers Are Invited to Submit Suggestion for New Column.

If you have no deep fat frying thermometer test your fat for temperature this way. When you think the fat is hot, drop an inch-cube of day old bread into the fat. The fat is the correct temperature for frying a cooked mixture (croquettes, fish balls, etc.) if the bread becomes a golden brown in 40 seconds. For an uncooked mixture (doughnuts, fritters, etc.) the bread should brown in 60 seconds.

* * * *

Mayonnaise that begins to curdle can often be restored to a thick, creamy mixture this way: Beat an egg yolk slightly and add a small quantity of oil to the egg, beating constantly. Then add the curdled dressing gradually, beating all the while.

* * * *

A little mound of mashed potatoes covering the tail of a whole fish to be baked or on top of each rib of a crown roast of lamb will keep the tail or the bones from becoming charred during the roasting. Remove the potatoes before serving.

* * * *

An enzyme peculiar to pineapple will prohibit gelatin mixtures from congealing when the fresh fruit is added. The fresh pineapple, however, can be stewed with the addition of a little water and sugar enough to sweeten and then added to a gelatin mixture. Use the juice from the stewed fruit in place of water when dissolving the gelatin.

Post Leaflets Offer New Food Suggestions

With tomatoes as plentiful as they are, suggestions for using them in various ways are in order and Dorothea Duncan has compiled several helpful ideas in a bulletin now available. Two other helpful bulletins also are ready and all three will be sent on receipt of a stamp. Mark the leaflets you would like to have and they will be mailed promptly.

Spiced Beets Add Zest to Salad

This colorful salad fashioned of small pickled beets surrounded by balls of cream cheese rolled in finely chopped walnuts and nested in lettuce provides an adequate main luncheon dish for a warm September day.

Olives Combine With Tomatoes

Cheese and Other Ingredients Provide Piquant Flavor.

With tomatoes plentiful, it behooves us to use them frequently at this season of the year, yet delicious as they are, they become monotonous unless they are served in varied forms. The following escalloped dish uses two and a half cups of strained tomatoes. The recipe will serve equally well next winter, when canned tomatoes can be used, but for the present it will be worth while to stew fresh tomatoes and strain them to obtain the required juice and pulp.

Escalloped Tomatoes and Olives.

2 tablespoons onion, chopped fine
1 tablespoon butter
2½ cups cooked and strained tomatoes (juice and pulp)
5 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
½ teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon paprika
1 cup grated cheese
¾ cup stuffed olives, sliced
½ cup butter crumbs

Brown onion in butter. Place tomatoes in top of double boiler and bring to a boil over direct heat. Combine dry ingredients; add gradually to tomatoes and bring to a brisk boil, stirring constantly. Place immediately over rapidly boiling water and cook five minutes, stirring occasionally. Add onion. Place layer of tapioca mixture in greased baking dish, cover with cheese, add layer of olives, then remaining tapioca. Cover with crumbs. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) 20 minutes. Serves six.

What to eat seven days a week is a problem that confronts the housekeeper constantly, but the situation becomes more acute over the week-end when preparations must be made for two days' meals. As an additional service to its readers, The Post today presents the first of a series of Saturday food pages, replete with suggestions which will help the woman at home to lighten the labor of week-end menu planning.

Miss Duncan's bulletins, containing unusual recipes, also are finding favor with readers. The three latest she has prepared are "Tomatoes," "Gelatin and Tapioca" and "Quickly Made Fillings." Fill out the coupon on this page and all three will be sent without charge. Or for special information, write to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post, inclosing a stamp for reply.

Omelette Is Tasty With Tomato Sauce

An omelette takes on new flavor if it is served with a tomato sauce made piquant with chopped onions and green peppers.

Heat two heaping tablespoons of butter and saute in the hot fat one onion and one-half green pepper, both chopped finely. When brown, stir in two level tablespoons of flour. If you have difficulty in mixing flour and butter smoothly, first mix the flour in two tablespoons of cold water until smooth and then add to the fat.

Next, begin adding gradually two cupfuls canned tomatoes exactly as if you were making cream sauce, but using the canned tomatoes and their juice instead of cream. Smash the tomatoes with the back of a spoon, so that they will not be whole, but will blend in the sauce. Season to taste with pepper and salt and keep simmering until the omelette is made. Pour the sauce over the omelette when serving.

The Cook's Dictionary

If terms used in your cook book baffle you, the following definitions may make their meaning clear:

A la mode—literally "in the fashion;" applied to ways of serving various dishes. For instance: "boeuf a la mode" is beef larded and pot roasted; "pie a la mode" is pie served with ice cream.

Many are the ways that cold, boiled ham can be served to blend its flavor lusciously with other ingredients.

For ham roll salad, mix Indian relish and mayonnaise in cream cheese to a consistency where it spreads well. Spread this mixture on thin slices of cold, boiled ham. Roll each slice and serve on lettuce with French dressing.

Leftover chopped ham makes an excellent "fill-in" for salad. Potatoes may be used as a base with onion juice and chopped cucumbers for flavor. This type of salad should be mixed with a thin mayonnaise or cream dressing. The best flavor will be obtained if, after being mixed together, the potatoes and ham are marinated in a small quantity of thin French dressing and set in the refrigerator for an hour to chill and season. The onion juice and cucumbers should be added later, and the whole mixed with enough additional dressing to hold the mixture together.

Spinach and Ham Salad.

6 slices cold boiled ham
Any desired dressing
Lettuce leaves

Drain the spinach and season with salt, pepper and either vinegar or lemon juice. Pack tightly in twelve small molds to cool. Place slices of cold boiled ham on young lettuce leaves and place two molds of spinach on opposite sides of each slice of ham. Serve with any salad dressing desired.

Bay Windows Improve Houses of Any Style

Whatever style your house, there is a bay window that will enhance it architecturally.

A bay window serves many purposes. It adds to the general appearance of a house. It brightens rooms, makes an attractive setting for furniture grouping and frames a lovely view.

These windows may be built to conform with any period—French provincial, Georgian, Regency, Colonial, Early American, English or modern. They may be placed on the first or second floors with equal success.

Bay windows may be added to an old house at a small cost. The price of such work would vary, of course, according to the style of the window and the material used in its construction.

Gelatin Made With Grape Juice Provides Unique Color Effect

Lavender is the least used of all colors as far as food color schemes are concerned. This isn't difficult to understand, for lavender is very seldom a natural food color and most white foods, when tinted with lavender food coloring, are anything but tempting to behold.

If, for some reason, you wish to use lavender as part of your table color scheme, try to bring this color into the dessert rather than the main course of the meal, for lavender food coloring lends itself more attractively to delicately tinted cake toppings, jellied desserts or frozen desserts than it does to vegetables. Use a complementary color with the lavender and let this color be more outstanding during the rest of the meal.

The floral decorations for the table can very easily be carried out in lavender, and if yellow is the other chosen color, a few yellow flowers may be added to the lavender ones to bring contrast to your bouquet. If the party is formal enough to demand place cards, these too may be touched with lavender.

Gelatin Can Be Tinted.

Amethyst glassware can be used and this will keep the chosen complementary color from becoming too predominant during the courses when any sign of lavender is omitted from the food.

Grape zip, a soft, spongy, whipped gelatin dessert, is suggested as an ideal lavender tinted dessert, for in natural food colors we find our prettiest tints.

GRAPE ZIP.

1 cup warm water
1 cup grape juice

Dissolve gelatin in warm water. Add grape juice. Chill until cold and sirupy. Place in a bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Pile in sherbert glasses. Chill until firm. Serves eight.

With the grape zip serve small cup cakes topped with icing, tinted a delicate yellow and garnished with candied violets.

CLEAN WITH ART GUM.

Art gum is excellent for cleaning felt hats, glossy leather purses or similar articles which cannot be washed. This is a preventative rather than a cure. Do not attempt to clean a badly soiled article in this manner, but go over it lightly as spots appear.

Metal foil bags now used to package coffee, peanuts, marshmallows, potato chips, etc., are excellent aid in keeping leftovers fresh and wholesome. After emptying, cookies, crackers and other dry foods will remain crisp and dry indefinitely when repacked in the metal bags.

Touch of Color Is Given Salad By Adding Beets

Sharp Tang Also Provided by Chopped Pickled Vegetable.

When we want a touch of crimson to off set the dullness of a listless looking salad we choose the humble beet. A plain cooked beet has its place in a mixed vegetable salad that depends upon its piquant French dressing for spice. If, however, the salad needs a sharp tang as well as a bright note of color choose a bit of chopped pickled beet. Potato salad will respond wonderfully in appearance and flavor with the addition of a small quantity of chopped pickled beet. The same treatment applied to the ghostly pallor of a mound of cottage cheese will give it added flavor and color.

Beets play an important part in the makeup of the salad illustrated. A nest of lettuce is used as a background for small, round pickled beets and balls of cottage or cream cheese rolled in finely chopped walnuts. This salad is at its best when served with a sharp French dressing. This is a salad that if served in generous portions will make an adequate main luncheon dish for warm September days. It is the kind of a salad that can be prepared in no more time than it takes to place the ingredients on the salad plates.

Keep several cans of small cooked beets on your pantry shelf. If the weather takes a sudden turn toward the equator take down a can of beets from your pantry shelf and set them to chill in the refrigerator until lunch time in enough juice from a bottle of sweet pickles to cover. The beets will absorb enough of the juice to give them a sweet, spicy flavor. Drain the beets well before preparing the salad.

Hot pickled beets may be prepared by heating leftover pickle juice and immersing the beets in the liquid until they are heated through. Using canned beets and pickle juice saves time in cooking and peeling the vegetable and saves the hands from unnecessary stain.

Cucumber Jelly Salad.

1 pint grated cucumber
Salt and paprika
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 tablespoon oil
1 tablespoon gelatin
2 teaspoons cold water
6 halves of walnut-meats
Mayonnaise
Lettuce leaves

Peel cucumbers, removing most of the white as well as the green skin. Grate enough to give one pint and season with salt, paprika, vinegar and oil. Add gelatin mixed with cold water. Place over the fire until warm and well mixed. Do not boil. In the bottom of an individual mold put a half kernel of walnut, then pour in the cucumber mixture and when it has cooled, chill. When ready to serve, turn each mold onto a nest of young lettuce leaves, and add a spoonful of mayonnaise.

Egg, Peanut and Celery Salad.

6 hard-cooked eggs
¼ to ½ chopped peanuts or peanut butter
Mayonnaise
Celery curls
Garnish of peanut halves.

Cut the eggs in half lengthwise, remove the yolks and combine with chopped peanuts or peanut butter and mayonnaise to moisten. Fill the whites with this mixture. Put two halves of egg on a plate, surround with curls of celery. Put two tablespoons of mayonnaise dressing over each egg and garnish with peanut halves. Lay a halved peanut on each celery curl.

Storm Balks The Legion's Day Sessions

Auxiliary Musters Quor and Nominates Its Officers.

By Clyde H. DuBose,
A Staff Correspondent.

Ocean City, Md., Sept. 6.—Storms this morning halted sessions of the seventeenth annual convention of the Maryland State Department of American Legion and Legion Auxiliary. The scheduled business meetings were postponed until tonight as high waves dashed over the boardwalk and autos soaked by heavy rain failed to start, making it impossible for delegates to reach meeting places.

Many convention goers stopping at hotels along the boardwalk were aroused before daylight when winds began to rock the building. Some who talked of leaving the resort were prevented by the announcement that only one road, and that water covered, connected this part of the Eastern Shore with the mainland.

The auxiliary, which housed a number of delegates in the Commander Hotel, the meeting place, managed to get together a quorum late in the morning and nominate officers.

Mrs. Frank P. Farley, of Chevy Chase, and Mrs. George F. Bamford, Sparrows Point, were nominated for the presidency, and Mrs. C. L. Mann, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Clagett Lamsberg, of Frederick, for treasurer; Mrs. Carl Sink and Mrs. George Bunting are unopposed for historian and chaplain, respectively.

Vice presidents who will head the various districts and who will be confirmed tomorrow are Mrs. Hallan Johnson, Baltimore district; Mrs. Frances Dehew, of Dundalk, north central; Mrs. Warren Boulden, northwestern; Mrs. Brooke Fetty, Takoma Park, southern, and Mrs. W. W. Gavin, Salisbury, southern Eastern Shore. No name has yet been submitted from western Maryland.

Elections will be held tomorrow morning, preceded by an elaborate memorial service for deceased members. The service will be conducted by Mrs. B. L. Mann, chaplain.

Tonight at a banquet presided over by Mrs. L. A. Couper, departmental elections will be held by the Eight and Forty, auxiliaries to the Forty and Eight.

Gov. Nice, who was expecting to speak at the annual banquet last night, was unable to be present. John S. White, Colmar Manor, delegate to the Maryland Legislature, spoke on "whether the American Government is worth saving." White closed by pointing out that the legion should dedicate itself to the youth of today, who are the rulers of tomorrow.

Melvin Scores 'Rail-Bed' Road As Substitute

Senator Believes Defense Highway and Carrier Needs 2 Problems.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 6.—State Senator Ridgely P. Melvin, Democrat, Anne Arundel, expressed the opinion today that utilization of the roadbed of the abandoned W. B. and A. Railway for a second highway to Washington instead of improving Defense Highway would not solve two "separate and distinct" transportation problems confronting Annapolis.

Senator Melvin stated his personal reaction in reply to a letter sent him by State Senator Raymond E. Kennedy (Democrat), Baltimore, requesting his views on the advisability of a second highway on the old railroad bed.

"Annapolis is confronted with two main transportation problems. One is to provide a safe and adequate highway between Annapolis and Washington. The other is to provide some rail service that would take the place of the recently closed South Shore branch of the W. B. and A. While the two are interrelated possibly to some extent as practical immediate problems they are separate and distinct," he said.

Legion Asks Bonus Paid Next Session

Rep. Flannigan Declares Payment Long Past Due.

Belgrano, National Chief, Also Urges Cash at Va. Rally.

By the Associated Press.

Virginia Beach, Va., Sept. 6.—The drive for legislation by the next session of Congress to authorize immediate cash payment of the bonus was the paramount consideration of addresses delivered by Representative John W. Flannagan, of the Ninth Virginia District, and National Commander Frank M. Belgrano, jr., of the American Legion, today before veterans attending the seventeenth annual convention of the Virginia arm of the legion.

Flannagan predicted that the plan for payment voted by both branches of Congress at the recent session, but vetoed by the President—the plan "to simply let the Government convert the veterans' certificates, which are non-circulating obligations, into circulating obligations"—will "become the law in January."

Belgrano told his colleagues that the issue "will never be settled until Congress has ordered full payment at face value, with accrued interest canceled and paid interest refunded."

The two speeches were in the same tenor as the one delivered yesterday by Randolph Leigh, who has announced he will oppose Senator Carter Glass for the Democratic nomination for the Senate. Leigh told the legionnaires he would vote for the bonus payment if elected.

Declaring "the soldier boys" are only asking payment of "an honest debt long past due," Flannagan asserted, "the certificates are the bonds of the Government, and the soldier is only asking that he be given the right to use his bond in the same way the national banks and Federal Reserve banks are permitted to use bonds.

"These banks under the law can deposit Government bonds and receive a like amount of money therefor. And if the money issued to the soldiers in this way is fiat money, printing press money, then Federal Reserve notes and every national bank note are fiat or printing press money."

Bushong Will Filed.

Charles Town, W. Va., Sept. 6.—The bulk of the estate of Frank L. Bushong, for more than 30 years a member of the bar here, who died two weeks ago, was left to the widow, Alice Kessler Bushong, according to the will filed here yesterday. He left his law library to his son, Lee Bushong, who was associated with his father for several years.

Blaze Razes High School In Cambridge

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Md., Sept. 6.—Students at Cambridge High School foresaw an enforced extension of their summer vacation today in the wake of a $200,000 fire which gutted their school building.

J. P. Noble, superintendent of Dorchester County schools, said classes would be suspended until further notice. The 500 or 600 pupils had been scheduled to return to school Monday.

Noble said he had received several offers from churches willing to donate the use of their buildings.

Wild Life Collection Burns.

The high school, built in 1929 at a cost of $100,000, was destroyed in the fire which started early today, and only a small quantity of equipment was salvaged.

Included in the loss was the valuable museum collection of specimens of all kinds of wild life in the county. The collection was gathered over a 30-year period by Elmer Hall, Hoopers island. The 200 or more items had been housed in the school building for some time.

Also destroyed was the library, considered one of the largest and most complete in the State school system.

Janitor Discovers Blaze.

Roland Harper, janitor, said he discovered a blaze near the switchboard when he reported for work, and found the interior of the building a mass of flames. Lightning was given as a possible cause of the fire.

Harper called the Cambridge Fire Department, which rescued two truckloads of furniture and the typewriters from the school's commercial department. The rest of the equipment was destroyed.

The school was built of brick and steel, and contained 25 classrooms, a large gymnasium and an auditorium. Only the walls were standing after firemen had poured water on the stubborn blaze for five hours.

Elmslie, division manager of the Bethlehem Mines corporation, Barrackville, will address the Monongahela Valley Coa Miners Institute Tuesday at a meeting in Mechanical Hall at the State university at Morgantown. Delegates to the West Virginia Coal Mining Institute's annual convention at Beckley October 4 and 5 will be named.

Charlottesville Fires Set Low Loss Record

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 6.—Only $1,855 damage was done by fires here during the fiscal year ending August 31, setting a new all-time record, it was revealed in a report to the city council. The loss approximates 10 cents per capita.

According to the National Board for Fire Prevention, this report likewise sets a new low record for cities throughout the United States.

For three years fire losses in the city have shown a steady decline. In 1933 the approximate cost per person for fires was $1 and in 1934 approximately 85 cents.

Name Receiver For Distillery In Baltimore

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 6.—Frank A. Warner, jr., official of a local wholesale liquor firm, today was appointed receiver for the Harford Pure Rye Distillers, Inc., by Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut.

Robert R. Carman was named counsel for the receiver, whose bond was set at $25,000, with an additional $5,000 to be furnished by creditors whose petition led to the appointment.

Judge Chesnut took action after a hearing on the affairs of the distillery as connected with the $226,000 shortage in the National Central Bank here.

Among the witnesses were William E. Katenkamp, president of the bank; Harry H. Hahn, former vice president and cashier, now at liberty under $20,000 bond in connection with the shortage, and former distillery officials who were arrested Wednesday on a warrant charging them with aiding and abetting in the misapplication of funds.

Area's CCC 12,200 Short In Enrollees

1,123 Vacancies in D. C. Allotment and 2,603 in Maryland's.

Virginia Only State in Region to Fill Its Veterans' Quota.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 6.—There are 2,603 vacancies in Maryland's allotment of jobs in the Civilian Conservation Corps, and 1,123 vacancies in the allotment to the District of Columbia, figures collected by the Third Corps Area headquarters here reveal.

All these vacancies are in the ranks of the "juniors"—youths between 18 and 25 who are from families on relief. There are also vacancies among the men enlisted in the vicinity of the camps, and in the allotment of jobs for veterans.

Only 254 Veterans Enroll.

Maryland was allotted 5,600 jobs for juniors, but has enlisted only 2,997. Provision was made for 480 locally enrolled men in the State, but only 260 have been hired, leaving 220 vacancies. The Maryland share of jobs for veterans was 620, but only 254 have sought jobs.

The District allotment of jobs for the younger men was 2,318, but only 1,195 have enlisted. Washington was allowed 250 veterans, but only 190 asked for jobs. The District, however, has its full quota, 32, of locally enlisted men.

Provision was made for the enlistment of 9,138 juniors in Virginia, but only 7,770 sought jobs, leaving 1,368 vacancies. Similarly, the State was allowed 1,392 locally enrolled men, but 922 were enlisted. However, Virginia has exceeded its veteran quota of 770 by 35.

Pennsylvania Also Shy.

Pennsylvania was allotted 37,194 jobs for juniors, of which 24,919 have been filled. Of the 1,936 jobs for locally enlisted men, only 1,534 have been filled. Places were to be given to 4,460 veterans from the State, but only 3,125 have asked for places.

In other words, there are a total of 12,200 unfilled jobs in the three States and the District of Columbia.

G. E. Marchand

These are but a few of the many keys to advancement that will be demonstrated by G. E. Marchand, of New York, "America's Foremost Maker of Successful Men and Women." Tonight at the National Theatre.

As a direct result of applying Mr. Marchand's method, thousands have been able to break away from dull, routine jobs and attain unexpected success. Following are just a few excerpts from many letters received from those who attend his program.

"More than doubled my earnings," Says Frank H. Copeland. "Received three promotions with the Hudson Motor Car Co," writes Wm. Lovett. "Now I am at the head of my own business. Success came from the start," says A. J. Thompson. "Increased my income from $4,000 to $7,000," telegraphs Irl R. Harris. "Last month I increased my pay check $97.32 over my previous month," writes J. E. Seitz. Letters like these are constantly pouring in.

If you are really ambitious, come Tonight. Mr. Marchand's program may be worth thousands of dollars to you in the years to come.

Recalls Diversions At Camp, Wonders About Max Baer

By Paul Gallico.
A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Hanging around here, waiting for the tennis players to come out of their hotel rooms and play tennis (the poor things, it isn't their fault, really, but the rain's), has kept me from making an expedition to Speculator, N. Y., to visit the training camp of Max Baer. But I read the newspapers assiduously every day, devour them, in fact, and, if I can believe my colleagues, some very remarkable things are going on there.

Apparently the most elaborate precautions in the history of pugilism have been taken to keep Max Baer's attention on the green grass, the blue mountains, lakes, the sky, the birds, the bees and the flowers, and, of course, the business at hand—which is training to fight Joe Louis.

At night he is stuffed into bed in a lodge buried in the Adirondack fastnesses, miles from the cottage of his charming bride, who, the sob sisters have been telling us in lengthy interviews, has been making the supreme sacrifice.

Never before that I can remember has the limelight been so frankly centered on the theories of wedded bliss as a drawback to athletic prowess. The two establishments of the Familiebaer have been celebrated in all the newspapers with fortissimo notices that the arrangement is but temporary until the Detroit negro menace has been leveled in the dust.

The necessity for this curious type of advertising is in itself a commentary on modern journalism which manages to keep emissaries camped on the thresholds of the famous so that the first time Father spends the night at the club, or in Bridgeport, the hue and cry and whoop and holler of "On to Reno" may be raised. The Baer has to explain to the journals, in great detail, the practical value of their temporary separation.

ONE thing is certain. If Max doesn't whip Louis, he is going to be very, very angry. Perhaps if, just before he enters the arena, he pauses for a moment to consider the sacrifices he has made in labor, exercise and loss of companionship for the sake of getting into condition it may arouse his ire to such an extent that the first six minutes of the fight—if it lasts that long—will be devoted to fighting instead of bowing and waving to his many friend around the ring.

I have spent many pleasant days at Speculator looking at prize fighters and hope, immediately upon my return from the pursuit of the golfers in Cleveland, to steal a glimpse of the Baers at work and at play.

In the old days when Tunney trained there it was strictly a bucolic institution given over to healthful exercise and the breathing of large amounts of air flavored with the scent of pines. This was in the days of prohibition, and the sole opportunities for dissipation was a certain place, 12 miles down the road, where if you told the man that Bill (or maybe it was Joe) sent you and that it was O. K., you could for $1 a bottle purchase Canadian ale, Lablatt's pale, and Carling's Red Cap, they being the favorite brands.

IN later years, as I recall, when Schmeling trained there, there was a small cottage back in the woods given over to games of chance. A white-coated Senegambian would hand you Scotch or rye highballs (free) and you were expected to drop small colored disks on a table ruled off in squares and at one end of which was a wheel. It was also possible to gallop the dominoes or play card games.

But for the rest one was expected to take one's pleasure sliding down a chute into the mountain lake, playing golf or tennis, or riding on razorbacked horses through the fragrant woods. There was one cinema theater about a mile down the road where one might receive innocent sentimental stimulation, and that about covered it.

There were no night clubs or hells or other iniquitous resorts (at that time) and it seems to me if it has remained unchanged by progress that it is an excellent place to sequester Max and prepare him for his trial by dynamite.

There is one rather thrilling place, some 14 miles north of Speculator, the name of which escapes me at the moment, but it is sort of a huge log barn to which, every Saturday night, the natives come from miles around for the square dances. Here in a steamy atmosphere of cheap perfume, beer and honest sweat, the big mountain men and innocent rustics, and the waitresses from the hotels and boarding houses, and the polacks, shake the floors and the rafters in old folk dances while the fiddler saws and scrapes and yells, "Ladies change . . . swing your partners," and gives forth the weird cries and directions of the country dance.

The steps and formations are intricate and the ball-room dancer sits on the sidelines helplessly and watches the simple folk whirl through number after number. I imagine they have kept Max Adbert away from that place because, in its simple rustic manner, it is more than a little exciting.

3-Run Eighth Puts Game 'On Ice'

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 6.—The Cardinals rallied in late innings behind Dizzy Dean's effective relief hurling and took their third consecutive victory from the lowly Boston Braves, 6 to 4.

It was the twenty-fourth victory of the season for the Red Bird pitching ace, who relieved faltering Bill Hallahan in the seventh and promptly doubled a run across home plate.

As both Chicago and New York also won today, the world champions maintained their National League lead of two and a half games over the Cubs and their three-game margin over the Giants.

The winners trailed the Braves until the eighth inning, when the Cardinal scoring machine finally rallied to score three runs.

Yield 12 Hits.

Boston went to work on Hallahan in the third, and altogether collected a total of 12 hits, ten of which were off Hallahan in six innings. The Cardinals won on 10 hits off Hal Smith.

Berger's double scored Mallon, who had walked in the third. Mallon singled in the fifth and again counted as Fletcher forced Whitney. In the sixth Durocher's fumble permitted Spohrer to get on base, and the Boston catcher scored on still another Mallon single. Berger scored the last Brave counter in the seventh.

The Cardinals scored twice in the sixth, and, with Dizzy Dean pitching, came to life again in the seventh. Singles by Davis and Gelbert preceded Dean's double, but only one run resulted.

Frisch Hits Triple.

In the eighth Manager Frank Frisch started the winning rally with a triple. Medwick was out, but Jim Collins doubled, scoring Frisch. Delancey walked. Durocher forced Delancey, but Durocher stole second and both Collins and Durocher scored on Gelbert's single.

Pittsburgh Blanks Brooklyn, Wins 13-0

Blanton Wins 17th Game, Grants Nine Hits.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 6.—The Pirates set a new season's high mark for effectiveness today when they pounded out 21 hits, starting with Bud Hafey's homer, and trounced the Dodgers, 13 to 0.

Pittsburgh scored in every one of eight innings and probably failed to equal the major league record in that respect only by not batting in the ninth. Seven major league clubs have scored in nine straight innings of a game, the Giants last performing the feat against Philadelphia in 1923. A couple of American League teams previously had recorded eight-inning scoring stretches but none of the games listed in the record books were won by shutouts.

Cy Blanton, clever freshman hurler, blanked the Dodgers today, giving only nine hits for his seventeenth victory of the season. He received some brilliant support from Second Baseman Pep Young, who pulled a circus catch with the bases full in the first and started a double play in the fifth while lying on the ground after a diving stop of Jim Bucher's drive.

Parker to Study—Play in Bermuda

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 6.—A youth, trying to get along, misunderstood—that's all.

Frankie Parker, the schoolboy tennis player, cast himself in that role today after he had been snowed under with criticism of his decision to quit school for a year and spend the time polishing up his forehand.

"Let's get this matter straight," pleaded the Lawrenceville, N. J., youngster. "I'm not giving up my education for a place on the Davis Cup team. I'm not going to re-enter Lawrenceville school this fall, that's all.

"Here's the straight dope—I'm going to Bermuda early next month with Mercer Beasley. I'm going to resume my studies there and, at the same time, take advantage of the year-round playing facilities. In that way I can kill two birds with one stone."

Parker's decision was precipitated by his poor showing against Fred Perry on Labor Day. When they shook hands across the net, after the match, Perry asked him: "Where's your forehand, Frankie?"

Giants Triumph Over Reds in 10th, 7-5

CINCINNATI, Sept. 6. — The Giants had to work the famous Hal Schumacher "jinx" overtime today to beat the Reds, 7 to 5, in ten innings, and retain second-place in the National League pennant battle.

Schumacher outlasted Paul Derringer, Cincinnati's mound ace, to gain his nineteenth victory of the season, his fourth over the Reds this year and his sixteenth against Cincinnati in his major league career. In five years as a Giant hurler he has lost to the Reds only once and has been tied by them once.

Cincinnati errors and a bit of dizzy base running that cut the biggest Red rally short helped the Giants along today. They scored five runs in the fourth, after getting a start when Ival Goodman dropped Joe Moore's liner, and a misplay by Billy Sullivan helped them tally their final run.

Score Three in Fifth.

Apparently sunk by the five-run rally, the Reds rallied for three counters in the fifth, making six hits including a triple by Ernie Lombardi and a double by Alex Kampouris. But when they had the corners crammed, Kiki Cuyler was caught off second and Derringer, trying to score on the run-down, was caught at the plate.

The victory left the Giants holding second place by two percentage points over the Chicago Cubs, who lead by a half-game in the won and lost count but trail in the percentages because they have played more games than New York.

Cubs, Outhit, Down Phils in 10th, 3 to 2

Galan's Home Run Nets Margin in Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Augie Galan, who tripled in the eighth inning to tie the score, hit a home run at the start of the home tenth today and for the second day in succession, the contendings Cubs took an overtime, 3-to-2, decision from Philadelphia.

The Phillies outhit the Cubs, 11 to 6, but Lon Warneke mixed in eight strikeouts to attain his season's seventeenth victory. Joe Bowman was his victim.

The Cubs scored a disputed run in the first when Ken O'Dea's drive to the right field corner was ruled a fair double, scoring Herman from first. Manager Jim Wilson, of the Phillies, held up the game ten minutes in futile protest that the ball was foul.

Polo Game Slated.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 6.—The Carlisle Medical Barracks team of Carlisle, Pa., will be the opponents of the Washington County polo four at Fenton Field, Williamsport, Sunday afternoon.

Proving That the Left Field Stands Are Harder Than the Head

Jake Powell, the Nats' star center fielder, was both down and out as this photograph was taken, but he recovered in time to stick to his guns. Salters hit a drive to the left-field wall in the sixth inning of the first game and Powell made a game but futile attempt to catch he ball. Players of both teams are seen gathered around, but Jake was soon on his feet and in action.

Tennis Tourney Is Postponed Fourth Day

Polo Play Also Delayed; Baseball Contests Washed Out.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6 (AP).—The fourth successive day of rain wrecked the Atlantic seaboard's sports program today and left tennis, polo and baseball fans wondering just when the downpour would let up.

Handcuffed completely for the fourth day in a row, the National Singles tennis championships were heading straight for a new record for consecutive postponements. The present record of five idle days in a row was set in the Women's National championships of 1933. Tournament officials now hope to complete the championships by Wednesday.

Polo Play Delayed.

The adverse weather forced the United States Polo Association to delay further the start of the open polo championship at the Meadow Brook Club which originally was to have begun tomorrow. The first game now is slated for Tuesday.

The storm permanently washed out two games between the New York Yankees and Chicago White Sox and three between the Detroit Tigers and Philadelphia Athletics. The White Sox must leave New York after tomorrow's double-header and the Tigers pull out of Philadelphia after a similar twin-bill. Thus there is no way the postponed games can be made up.

Washington ahead, 8-7 with a five-run disturbance against Russ Van Atta and Jock Knott in the sixth.

Jack Russell started parceling out the runs to the Browns in the third when Sammy West's triple with two on base provided the big punch of a four-run rally. The Nats retrieved two runs against Merritt Cain in the same inning, but it was 6-2 in favor of the Browns when they had finished with Russell in the fourth.

Things Start Happening.

With Van Atta relieving Cain when the Nats picked up a run in the fourth, the game wore into the sixth with the Browns in possession of a 7-3 lead when things began to happen.

Pinch Hitter Fred Schulte broke his bat on a single to left and Kuhel followed with a single. The bases were full when Myer walked and Miles scored two runs with a single to center. Powell doubled past Clift to tie the score as two more runs crossed the plate and then Kress put the Nats in front, 8-7, with a single off Knott, who relieved Van Atta at that point.

Coppola, making his first appearance for the Nats in a month, escaped the seventh and eighth innings safely, but the game crashed down about him in the ninth. He wlaked West, pitched a single to Hemsley and then it was that Clift hit his home run to put the Browns two runs in front. They scored another run off Hadley before the inning was over, but it was as superfluous as Mussolini's imminent declaration of war.

Yankees Recall Seven Players From Minors

New York, Sept. 6. (AP).—The New York Yankees today announced the recall of seven players who have been out on option with minor league clubs.

Fred Muller, infielder, was recalled from Oakland of the Pacific Coast League. Recalled from Newark of the International League were Infielders Roy Schalk, George McQuinn and Don Heffner, Outfielder Fred Walker, Catcher Willard Hershberger and Pitcher Marvin Duke.

Bauer, Stifel Advance to Golf Finals

Will Play Today for Title in Mason-Dixon Links Tourney.

Special Dispatch to The Post

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Sept. 6.—Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., and Fritzi Stifel, Wheeling star, the two favorites in the Mason-Dixon golf championship, today advanced to the final round.

Miss Bauer coasted to the final by swamping Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis., under an avalanche of par golf, 8 and 7. Miss Bauer, who only last week captured the medal at the National and then repeated here, continued to hit the ball well to be out in 40 and 6 up. She then took both the tenth and eleventh holes on the back nine to gain the verdict.

Miss Stifel had a much tougher match, finding a real Tartar in Mary Kuhn, of Pittsburgh, and being forced to the eighteenth before winning, one up. Miss Kuhn jumped away to an early lead when she won the first two holes with pars. Miss Stifel, however, came back on the third and fourth to even the match. From there on it was nip and tuck with Fritzi one up at the turn. She increased her margin to two at the thirteenth, but Mary went on to take both the fifteenth and sixteenth to square the match.

Miss Kuhn was forced to drop a 20-footer on the seventeenth, but rapped the ball right in the cup to stay all even. However, on the eighteenth Miss Kuhn, who had the honor, hit a bad iron on the par-3 hole and was short of the carpet. Fritzi hit a grand shot to within 6 feet of the pin, and when Miss Kuhn's approach overran the green, Miss Stifel gained the one-up decision.

Tomorrow's final will be over the 36-hole route.

Lanier Takes Thriller At Detroit Race Track

Detroit, Sept. 6 (AP).—Lanier, the favorite, won the $1,000 Grosse Pointe Handicap at the Fair Grounds today, beating Luxuro out by a nose in a stirring finish which had the crowd of 9,000 roaring.

Baer Punches Hard in Test For Louis

None Is Floored, However; Negro Signs Fresh Sparring Mates.

By the Associated Press.

SPECULATOR, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Max Baer's twelfth boxing workout today in preparation for his match with Joe Louis September 24 was his best.

The former world's heavyweight champion uncorked an aggressive attack from start to finish of a five-round workout against Willie McGee, Tony Cancela and Lou Scozza and never took a backward step. All three sparring partners took a beating from Max's accurate rights to the head but there were no knockdowns.

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Sept. 6 (AP). A battery of sparring mates of assorted sizes has been rounded up for Joe Louis to try his punching power on starting tomorrow.

Louis' handlers said today they had arranged to bring in Eddie Malcolm, Al Walker and One-Punch Leo Williams, of New York; Tiger Henderson, of Hartford, and Phil Johnson, of Jersey City.

Larry Johnson and Roy Williams already are in camp and several more sparring partners probably will be summoned from the Middle West.

Just how long the "shock brigade" will remain intact is a moot point. "Shufflin Joe" doesn't pull his punches in training and the betting is 1 to 5 there'll be a heavy turnover before the Detroit Negro flash is ready for his 15-round battle with Max Baer in New York September 24.

Tigers Buy Hurler.

Louis Funds Suit Filed In D. C.

Bill Asks Accounting to Determine Share of Fight Proceeds.

Asserts Title Contender Was Promised 22½ Per Cent of Net.

JOE LOUIS, heavyweight championship contender, yesterday filed suit in District Supreme Court in an effort to collect what he claims as his share of proceeds from an appearance at Griffith Stadium during the recent colored Elks convention.

The bill asking for an accounting and an injunction names the following defendants: J. Finley Wilson, grand exalted ruler, I. B. P. O. E.; the Lincoln Athletic Club, Walter Johnson, Joseph H. Maxwell, Douglas Smith, operator of the District Athletic Club; the Washington Baseball Club, Inc., and the Washington Baseball Park.

Louis in his bill states that by oral agreement, through his agent, Julian Black, he arranged for personal appearances during the Elks convention. He said he was promised 22½ per cent of the net proceeds from the fights at the Griffith Stadium.

Division of Rest.

Wilson was to get 22½ per cent, the Lincoln Athletic Club, 45 per cent, and Johnson, Maxwell and Smith, 10 per cent.

The Washington Baseball Club, according to the suit, was to sell all tickets, pay expenses, and then distribute the profits. Gross proceeds amounted to $8,849.70 and expenses were $2,140.95, leaving a balance of $6,708.75.

Through Attorney Michael F. Keough, Louis asks for an order restraining the Washington Base-Ball Club from turning over its collections to the District Boxing Commission, as threatened, and requests an auditor to determine his share of the money.

Zimowski Will Coach Lumberport Gridmen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 6.—Zygmund Zimowski, of Jeanette, Pa., for four years an outstanding football star at Salem College, will take charge of the Lumberport high school football and basketball teams for the first semester of this year.

Zimowski, who was captain and center on last year's Salem eleven, will take over the duties of Herbert E. Stewart, who was appointed head coach but plans to attend school for the first semester.

Hokuao, at $7.10, Leads All Way to Win Narragansett Race

Miss Careful 2 Lengths In Rear

By the Associated Press.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, R. I., Sept. 6.—It was nothing but Hokuao in the fifth race today, a mile and one-sixteenth for 4-year-olds and up. The 6-year-old roan from the stable of J. L. Roberts led from flagfall to finish to win by two lengths.

Taking mud from the heels of Hokuao all the way was W. Elliott's Miss Careful, the only contest in the race being between T. F. Sword's Incandescent, the favorite, and Joe E. Brown's Little Lad for third place. Little Lad ran third through the early part, but Incandescent showed a burst of speed through the fifth furlong to move up from sixth and when she looked Little Lad in the eye the latter faltered.

Length and Half Ahead.

Miss Careful was a length and a half in front of Incandescent, which had ten lengths on Little Lad at the finish. The winner, second choice of the bettors, paid $7.10, $4.10 and $2.80.

The daily double today paid $123.70 despite the victory of the favored Proteus in the third race. The winner of the first was an 8-to-1 shot, Bullfinch. There were 114 tickets sold on this combination. The continued rain kept the crowd down.

MY DATE drew into a good lead in the first three-sixteenth, dominated the running for the remainder of the way and was never threatened. LADY GREENOCK stumbled and tore to the outside at the start and Mauro was forced to take up. She came around fast on the outside. As the race was run she was best. THE REW came willingly under punishment through the stretch.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:28. Off at 3:35. Winner, A. Hulicoate b. g. (6), by Infinite—Our Option. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:49, 1:16 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PROTEUS, $6.80, $4.00, $2.90; RACOOON, $5.40, $3.30; CHIMNEY TOP, $2.90.

PROTEUS, under steadying restraint while following the pace of FLAG BEARER, ran the latter down when reaching the stretch, drew into a good lead, but had to be punished in the closing stride to hold RACOOON safe. The latter, unruly at post, raced with the leaders, came to the outside in the stretch, closing with a rush. CHIMNEY TOP, well placed throughout, was unable to improve his position in the closing drive.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Howard W. Jackson Purse, claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:03. Off at 4:03½. Winner, F. A. Carreaud's blk. (5), by Satrap—Pasata. Trained by P. C. Travis. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:14 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HASTIPAST, $6.40, $3.60, $3.40; LIBERTY OAK, $9.20, $6.10; CHATTERPOL, $5.30.

HASTIPAST, shuffled back at the start, moved up steadily on the inside leaving the back stretch and, closing stoutly through the stretch, was up in the closing strides to wear down LIBERTY OAK. The latter showed good speed, withstood determined opposition from FOREWARNED, disposed of him, but was unable to withstand the closing challenge of the winner. CHATTERPOL moved up stoutly on the inside and closed stoutly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:35½. Winner, J. L. Robert's ro. h. (6), by Overall—Waidey. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $900; second, $180; third, $85; fourth, $35. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:15, 1:52 3-5, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOKUAO, $7.10, $4.10, $2.80; MISS CAREFUL, $5.70, $3.40; INCANDESCENT, $2.80.

HOKUAO, at home in the going, took command at once, drew clear and, rated along under steadying restraint, was placed under intermittent punishment to the closing and was never threatened. MISS CAREFUL chased close after the winner from practically the beginning and continued stoutly to the close. INCANDESCENT a trailer for first half-mile, closed some ground.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:08. Winner, L. E. Oale's ch. g. (5), by Wildair—Prochne. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:41, 1:48 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PREFER, $36.70, $14.80, $8.00; RESPECT, $3.80, $2.80; OLAMAY, $3.90.

PREFER went to the front in the run to the first turn, drew clear and, steadied along in advance of her field, was never menaced. RESPECT, restrained early, came gamely on the outside through the stretch but was unable to keep pace with the stretch, closed with a belated rush. DE VALERA, well placed, weakened.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:09. Off at 5:09½. Winner, D. AUCTION SALES

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1935—
THOS. J. OWEN & SON, Auctioneers,
1431 Eye Street Northwest.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF THE VALUABLE EIGHT-STORY AND BASEMENT BRICK AND CONCRETE APARTMENT HOUSE, KNOWN AS "FAIRFAX HOTEL," LOCATED AT 2100 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE NORTHWEST.

Because of default in the terms and conditions of, and by virtue of a certain deed of trust executed by 2100 Massachusetts Avenue, Incorporated, a corporation duly incorporated under the laws of the State of Delaware, dated February 1, 1924, recorded among the land records of the District of Columbia, February 28, 1924, in Liber 3156 at folio 389 et seq., and at the request of over twenty-five per centum of the holders of the bonds secured thereby, the undersigned substituted trustee, by appointment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, dated January 15, 1930, in Equity Cause No. 51424, will offer for sale at public auction in front of the premises on TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1935, AT FOUR O'CLOCK P. M., the following described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia; and which is described as follows: All of lots 20, 21, 22 and 23 in John B. Alley's subdivision of Square 67, as per plat recorded in Liber 11, folio 98, of the records of the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, except that part of said lot 22 which was conveyed by deed recorded among the land records of the District of Columbia, in Liber 3280, folio 431, said excepted part being described as follows: viz., beginning for the same at the southwest corner of said lot 23 and running thence northeasterly with the west line of said lot, 39.15 feet to the north face of the wall; thence easterly with the north face of the wall, 64/100 of a foot to the east face of a brick wall; thence southwesterly with said east face of said wall and parallel with the west line of said lot to the rear line of said lot 23, and thence west along said rear line to beginning; also lots 27 and 28 in Mary Cotter's subdivision in said square 67 as per plat recorded in Liber 13, folio 127 of the records of the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia; also north 30 feet front on Twenty-first street by the full depth of original lot 16 in said square 67, together with all buildings and improvements thereon, consisting of the "Fairfax Hotel," known as premises No. 2100 Massachusetts avenue, northwest, together with all furnishings, fittings and fixtures thereon which said trustee is authorized by said deed of trust, to sell and convey.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase price to be paid in cash on or before the first day of November, 1935, balance in two equal installments payable on or before one and two years from date of sale, respectively, with interest thereon at the rate of five and one-half per centum per annum from day of sale, said interest payable semiannually, and to be secured by first deed of trust on the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. The said trustee will receive no bid from anyone offering to bid who shall not at or before the hour of sale, or any adjournment thereof, deposit with said trustee, as a pledge that such bidder will make good his bid in case of its acceptance, a deposit of $15,000, either in cash or certified check on a local bank or trust company, made or indorsed payable to the undersigned trustee, or in lieu thereof bonds of the par value of $30,000 in form transferable by delivery, secured by said deed of trust, said bonds to have all unpaid coupons attached thereto. The deposit of any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him immediately after the sale. The said trustee reserves the right to reject any and all bids and withdraw the property from sale. Adjustments with respect to taxes, assessments, insurance, rentals, income from operation of property, interest and all other adjustments shall be made as of the date of sale. The said trustee will continue to operate, manage and operate said property and collect the income therefrom from date of sale to date of transfer upon existing terms as set forth in said deed of trust. After settlement of sale said trustee will not be responsible for any bills or expenses incurred in the management or operation of said property. All expenses of title examination, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., are to be at the cost of the purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with on or before November 1, 1935; otherwise, the trustee reserves the right to forfeit said deposit or to resell the property at the risk and cost of the defaulting purchaser, upon the foregoing terms, after seven days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, District of Columbia, or with or without forfeiting the deposit the trustee may avail itself of any legal or equitable rights against the defaulting purchaser.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

SAILOR-OF-FORTUNE, commander of the fleets of five different nations, Thomas Cochrane, tenth Earl of Dundonald, first served his own country. He first went to sea when he was 17 years old, and at 26 had gained naval recognition for brilliant service in the Mediterranean.

Difficulties with superior officers brought him an appointment to an obscure post, but later he was returned to active service where he once again proved himself. An outspoken critic of naval abuses, Lord Cochrane was ordered to duty in the Mediterranean to get him away from Parliament. After his victory over the French fleet off Rochefort, France, he again got into trouble with a superior, was courtmartialed, found guilty and ordered retired at half pay. This was not the end of his persecutions, for he was again tried and found guilty—this time for stock manipulations which revolved about a false rumor that Napoleon was dead. Although he was innocent, Lord Cochrane was fined, dismissed from the navy and sentenced to prison.

Here began his sailor-of-fortune career. After serving his term he accepted an invitation to command the Chilean navy. He served Chile with brilliance, defeating the Spanish and their superior fleet.

His next step was to Peru. Later came his command of the Brazilian navy, during which he won a series of victories over the Portuguese. His final foreign command was in the Greek navy.

In 1832, he was pardoned by the English king, and in 1847 Victoria reinstated him as a Knight of the Bath and officer of the British navy.

500 Reported Killed In Florida Storm

kill more people on an average every day of the year than were killed this week in the Florida hurricane.

Frank Leach, owner and manager of the Leach Auto Brake Service Co., said today: "In stormy, wet weather good brakes are more important than at any other time to keep motorists within the SAFETY MARGIN. Your brake lining must be good and your brakes must be in proper adjustment to prevent skidding and to insure safe, positive stops."

Otis Elevator Co. Gets Interior Contract

Contract for the 20 passenger elevators to be installed in the new Interior Department Building has been awarded the Otis Elevator Co., of Washington, the procurement division of the Treasury Department announced yesterday.

Cost of the elevator system will be $528,496 in the $11,110,000 structure, the Treasury stated. Contract for the escalators was awarded the Westinghouse Electric Co., of Chicago, which will put in the system for $93,100.

Crash Victim's Widow Asks $25,000 Damages

Damages of $25,000 were asked yesterday by Mrs. Hazel G. Crawford, of Bethesda, Md., for the death of her husband, Harry Crawford, in an automobile accident on the Rockville pike February 10.

The Imirie-Rowe Chevrolet Co., of Bethesda, and Call Carl, Inc., 614 H street northwest, are named defendants. The bill charges negligence of both defendants. Crawford was said to be a passenger in a car operated by an agent of the Imirie-Rowe Co. The car collided with a wrecking truck of Call Carl, Inc.
